HUNGRY MOTHER KILLS FOUR CHILDREN AND SELF

San Francisco, Aug. 31 (I.N.S.).—Crushed by poverty and hunger, Mrs. Edna Fuller, 39, gave up the struggle here today when she huddled her five children in one room, locked the door and windows, stuffed all cracks and turned on the gas. When Otto Fuller, 40, the husband and father, a night watchman, returned home he found his wife and four of the children dead.

Stentor, according to Homer, had a voice as loud as the combined voices of fifty men, but Fred Patzel would not fear him. His voice can be heard two miles away.

OFFICE SEEKERS should listen to the wisdom of the champion hog caller: "You've got to have appeal, as well as power in your voice. You've got to convince the hogs you've got something for them."

Many politicians have power in their voices, but when the voters come they have nothing for them. Consider the Republican party. It calls the farmers, and year after year they come running. When the election is won they are told: "Sorry, but we cannot interfere with the law of supply and demand."

That is poor comfort for hogs or men.

STRIKE MOB QUELLED BY PRIEST

3 RIOTS KEEP POLICE ON JUMP AT MANVILLE MILL; WOMEN INJURED

Manville, R. I., Aug. 31.—A priest pacified a crowd of belligerent strikers today in the vicinity of the Manville-Jenckes mill after three riots marked by growing intensity of bitterness kept deputy sheriffs and State troopers busy for hours.

The strikers claim that many of their number, including women, were clubbed by the police during attempts to disperse the mob. Police deny clubbing, but have stationed officers armed with riot guns at strategic points on the roofs of mill buildings.

Excitement was running high with the throng jeering at efforts of the police to dismantle them from attempts to rush the mill gates, when Rev. Alexander Dubuisch appeared in his robes and moved through the crowd with uplifted arm.

The priest commanded attention and as soon as he could be heard he harangued the strikers, appealing to them to disperse and to avoid violence. Most of the strikers departed while the remainder lurked peacefully about the bridge leading to the mill.

union leaders asserted that they have ample funds for a long strike. No negotiations for a settlement are going on according to Organizer Horace A. Riviere.

More than 100 strikers were allowed to enter mill buildings, one at a time, for their tools. Many are leaving town to seek work elsewhere, while others wished to get their belongings for fear strike-breakers would use them.

6 BRICK YARD WORKERS NEAR DEATH AS STEAM BLAST WRECKS KILN

Enveloped in live steam six young men were burned and one seriously injured when the big doors of a brick kiln at the establishment of the Winchester Brick Company, Winchester, were blown open today.

The victims, who were taken to the Winchester Hospital, were:

Andrew Doherty, twenty-seven, of Summer street, Stoneham; fractured spine and burns.

Frank Gonzalves, thirty-two, of Belmont street, Woburn; burned about face, arms and back; finger torn off, and suffering from shock.

Richard Coleman, twenty-one, No. 6 Border street, Woburn; burned about face, arms and back.

Walter Kirby, twenty-three, No. 35 Harvard street, Winchester; burned about face, arms and back.

Lawrence Munnelley, nineteen, of Harvard street, Winchester; burned about face, arms and back.

Donald McCarthy, eighteen, of Harvard street, Winchester; burned about face, arms and back.

The young men were employed to remove hot bricks from the kilns in which they are baked, the bricks being white rather than red. The cylinders which do the baking are under 200 pounds steam pressure, and the heavy doors of the kiln are fastened with bolts.

According to officials of the company, the men failed to allow time for the steam to disappear before pulling the bolts, with the result that the doors were blown open.

Doherty, who was in the forefront, bore the brunt of the blast, being struck by the doors, while the others were burned by the steam.

2 HUGE BEARS SPREAD TERROR; POSSE IN HUNT

Springfield, Aug. 31.—Two black bears, so nearly full grown as to assume terrifying proportions if encountered on a lonely road, today caused a reign of terror in outlying sections of this city and adjacent towns.

State constabulary and posses of citizens armed with rifles are searching for the animals, which escaped early today from the yard of a filling station where they were chained in North Wilbraham on the Boston road.

The territory in that vicinity is thinly settled, with considerable wood growth forming cover for the brace of bears, and as berries provide abundant provender it is believed they will be difficult to find.

Residents of the section, particularly those who have young children, kept the telephone wires to the constabulary barracks at North Wilbraham humming in alarm today. Children were not permitted to leave home and many adults ventured out only in fear and with caution.

While animal experts declared the bears were not dangerous and would not attack human beings unless provoked, the majority of residents refused to take chances.

While he has not read the proposal of Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, for a revision of the debts, or cancellation, it was said at the Summer White House today Mr. Coolidge believed the government had taken an attitude in the matter that would not be changed.

All the great powers with one exception, it was added, had funded their debts to the United States and it is apparent to Mr. Coolidge that France will adjust her debt in accordance reached by its duly author-

HEAVY QUAKE LAYS BIG AREA IN AZORES IN RUIN

Washington, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—The severest earthquake in the history of the islands, shook the Azores. American Consul Horace Remillard reported to the State Department today from Horta. All Americans, he said, were believed to be safe.

London, Aug. 31.—A violent earthquake, which shook the island of Fayal in the Azores today, reduced part of the town of Horta to ruins. There were some deaths, dispatches say, and many were injured.

A cable operator in the Fayal relay office notified the company's headquarters his battery room was destroyed and expressed the opinion that, if there was another shock, the building would collapse.

A further report to a London business house from a point three miles outside the town of Horta said there had been an unusually severe quake. It was feared the island had suffered considerably, but there was no definite information beyond the fact that the quake had occurred.

Fayal is the westernmost island of the central group of the Azores. It is of volcanic origin, and, like the other members of the group, has been visited by earthquakes from time to time. The population of the island is about 25,000, practically all Portuguese.

DEATH BOOSTS ESTATE OF RUDY TO $500,000

New York, Aug. 31.—Although at the time of the death of Rudolph Valentino announcement was made that he was virtually penniless it was learned today that the estate will amount to close to $500,000 when the brother of the late screen star arrives from Europe tomorrow.

According to S. Goodie Ullman, manager of the dead actor, the increased valuation of the estate is due to the tremendous popularity of the latest Valentino film, which was released after the death of the screen star.

The income from the film alone, Ullman said, has been running as high as $50,000 a day, and the royalties to which Valentino was entitled will continue to enrich his estate.

In addition, Ullman said, there has been a constant demand for earlier Valentino releases, which are now showing throughout the country at theatres where crowds are mobbing the box offices.

Plans to ship the body of Valentino to Hollywood proceeded today, al-

PRIEST QUELLS MILL MOB

early morning, the crowd refrained from attempting violence, remaining on the town side of the bridge leading to the mill. Some of the younger members started hurling stones, but were stoped by their older comrades and the crowd generally resorted to booing the line of guards.

Three riots, each one greater in intensity than that preceding it, kept State troopers and deputy sheriffs awake most of the night.

During the series of clashes, which for a time assumed grave proportions, a woman was clubbed about the head by a State trooper, two men strike sympathizers reported they were clubbed, and the police only thrust the strikers back across the bridge after three severe hand-to-hand encounters.

STRIKERS HURL ROCKS.

A mob, estimated at more than 3,000 strikers, three times rushed the police in an attempt to gain the mill gates. At least half a dozen of the rioters were placed under arrest. The strikers only laughed at the police when ordered to disperse.

The strikers charged, hurling barrages of rocks and bricks, while the police met the advances with night sticks. Minor serious trouble is expected today.

Forewarned by Sunday's riotint, growing out of the arrival of non-union workers in an armored car guarded by private detectives, the police had made preparations to prevent a recurrence. At the mill there were fourteen deputy sheriffs under High Sheriff Andrews, and twelve state troopers under Lieutenant Baird.

The mob was in an ugly mood, and numerous threats could be heard. The first riot began when some of the strikers, said to be among the foreign element, tried to pass the police lines.

A fierce fracas ensued, which was suppressed finally by a charge of the combined defense force, armed with police sticks. A man said to be the ringleader of the mob was placed under arrest and locked up.

Shortly after the completion of this first attempt to pass the lines, the mob, reinforced, advanced to the attack, and a barrage of rocks descended on the police and the mill. Hundreds more windows were broken, and several more arrests were made before this attack was repelled.

The third and worst riot broke out a little later. It started when an unidentified man entered into personal combat with one of the troopers. From a nearby hill, where hundreds of strikers were overlooking the scene, a large number of the rioters advanced, showering the police with rocks and bricks. For a few minutes the fighting was extremely brisk but once again the law forces were victorious.

Feeling in the mob was intensified by the report that Mrs. Mary Huncharik had been clubbed severely about the head by a State trooper, and the rioters became uglier in their threats.

The police allege the woman attacked one of the troopers who had just arrested her husband, but Mrs. Huncharik charged she was clubbed when she entered the milling crowds to hunt for her two children. After receiving treatment she was taken to her home.

Two other strike sympathizers, Paul Pawjyczynski and Daniel Harachuk, both charged they were clubbed by the police.

The mob was ordered by the police to disperse. The police lines were extended, and the strikers and their friends forced off the company property on all sides. The strikers would not disperse, but stood some little distance away and hissed and booed the police.

Riot guns were hurried into position on the roofs of mill buildings, and also were set up at street and other important points in the immediate vicinity. The police were extremely apprehensive of further trouble.

One of the armored cars left the scene during a lull in the rioting. Strikers claimed it was taking some of the non-union men back to Pawtucket.

In this connection a rumor was spread that men in the armored car opened fire upon two motorists. The two motorists, Amie Turlino and Philip Dupre, asserted they were shot at twice.

Chaw and Aim Is Good! Yes, by Cracky!

Augusta, Me., Aug. 31.

Charlie Foster, Maine's new champ,
Don't think much of the movie vamp,
Can't toss hoss shoes, never could fiddle,
Not much good at the swing down the middle,
At dancin' and such he's way outer date,
But, wam, can't he expect-to-rate.

Four score and seven years ago a lusty baby was born on this continent, and the hamlet of Hampden Highlands, way down East, was the scene of the debut of this newest of Maine's champions, Charles B. Foster, farmer, soldier, and most unerringest spitter in the Pine Tree State, by cracky.

Best of all Charlie is an impromptu champion. Unheralded and unsung he came to Augusta, with thousands of others to attend the great celebration of the Three Quarters of a Century Club, the members all being native State o' Mainers over the 75-year mark.

NOT EVEN SCHEDULED.

His act wasn't even on the schedule. There had been dancing and singing and speech-making, and the only rivalry among the oldsters was the horse-shoe throwing contest, which was won handily by Frank Beal, of Vesay, acknowledged champion of the barnyard game for more than 47 years, and at 84 still strong enough to make monkeys of mere kids of 74 and 75.

But Governor Ralph O. Brewster happened to step out of the executive mansion and found Charlie, who is eighty, conducting a spirited debate with G. H. Blodgett of Bowdoinham, who is two years his senior.

Right in Jim Blaine's back-yard, sitting on the gubernatorial doorstep they were discussing the finesse and salient points of spitting, spitting for distance and accuracy, and each claimed to be the superman at that perhaps inelegant but wholly typical art.

"Settle it right here and now," said the Governor.

The rivals rose in their might and prepared for the strange battle so often fought out on Winter nights around Jed Fowler's stove in the general store.

But here W. W. Venner of Augusta, declared himself in, and the belligerent pair moved over to give him room.

'TWAS "WITH."

"With or without?" demanded Charlie, reaching into a hip pocket and dragging forth a whole hand of it black plug tobacco.

"Against the wind, but with the chawin' terbacker," decided Mr. Blodgett. "Though it ain't hardly right to spill chawin' terbacker around the Governor's lawn."

Two out of three was to win for distance, and two out of three for accuracy.

Mr. Venner was first to fall out of the strange tournament, murmuring as he retired some mixed metaphor about having bitten off more'n he could chew.

Entrant Blodgett sent out his two for distance, while the crowd gasped, and then surrounded the target with his accurately sent missives.

WINS ON FIRST.

And now comes Charlie. His first effort for distance left Blodgett's best so far in the rear, that that was all over right away. Then he turned a critical eye on the chip of wood that was the target, and sent his dark-brown darts so bravely and so truly that the chip was all wet. He was accorded the honors by popular acclaim.

2 WOMEN AND MAN HURT IN MELROSE CAR CRASH

Three persons, two of them women, were hurt today in an automobile collision at Main and Morgan streets, Melrose Highlands. Frank, Annie and Celia Gertzberg, all of No. 91 Granite street, Malden, were treated at the Melrose Hospital for cuts and bruises. They were riding in a machine driven by Natnan Gertzberg of the same address. The other car was driven by Anthony G. Koslowski, of No. 166 Berkshire street, Cambridge.

though awaits his brother on arrival tomorrow.

Ullman said a special car had been engaged. He and Mrs. Ullman and Pola Negri will accompany the body.

Valentino's last thoughts were of Miss Negri, she revealed, showing a letter from Dr. Harold D. Meeker, who attended him.

"I am asking Miss Pickford, an old friend and patient of mine, to deliver this message to you," said the letter.

"About 4 o'clock Monday morning Valentino opened his eyes, stretched out his hands and said: 'I'm afraid we won't go fishing together. Perhaps we will meet again. Who knows?'

"His mind was very clear and this was the first time he seemed to realize he would not get well. Then he said:

"'Pola—if she does not come in time, tell her I think of her.'"

Miss Negri broke down after showing the letter.

Fairbanks, the announcement said, has promised "liberal financial aid" to the knights.

LOVE-LIFE BLASTED, ALL POLA CAN DO IS CRY

New York, Aug. 31 (I.N.S.).—While plans were being made today to take the body of Rudolph Valentino to Hollywood for burial, Pola Negri, the fiance of the dead screen star, declared that her love-life was blasted forever.

Miss Negri reluctantly faced reporters in her room at the Hotel Ambassador and sobbed that she "would never love another man as long as she lived."

She had recovered from the attack of hysteria after the funeral of Valentino, but still was shaken with grief. "I haven't been able to sleep," she told the reporters. "I have eaten nothing.

'All I can do is cry, cry, cry.

"I shall never fall in love again."

When she came into the room to see the reporters, Miss Negri was supported by her secretary, Miss Florence Hien, and a nurse.

Jean Acker, first wife of Valentino, was in seclusion today. It is reported that she and her mother will shortly make a trip to the country.

Steals Only a Kiss but He's Held for Robbery

New York, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—Though all he stole from one of his victims was a kiss, police said James Murray, 16, was in the line-up at police headquarters today charged with robbery.

The youth is alleged to have held up Miss Elinore Sweet and John Martin, her companion, in the Bronx.

The young woman said Murray returned a bracelet and four dollars he had taken from her and kissed her, saying: "I hope we meet under more favorable circumstances."

He did not return, it is charged, a watch and some change taken from Martin.

NURSES CALM PATIENTS IN NEWTON HOSPITAL FIRE

Fear spread through Newton Hospital today when a blazing awning fired the side of the maternity building, causing smoke to float into the building. Arrival of fire apparatus and the clanging of bells caused excitement which was suppressed by nurses and attaches, who ran through the wards, calming nervous patients.

Firemen extinguished the blaze with chemicals.

NO RESPITE FOR MADEIROS

Governor Fuller today flatly refused to grant a respite for Celiatino Madeiros, condemned to die the week of September 5, unless requested to do so by Judge Webster Thayer or Attorney-General Jay R. Benton.

William G. Thompson, counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti, to whom the refusal was made, for his part firmly rejected the Governor's suggestion that he see Judge Thayer and ask him to request the respite.

Attorney Thompson declared it would be unethical for him to take this action, asherting it should be done by the Attorneyi-General, who, he charged, was evading an agreement and his duty.

The conference took place in the Governor's office and was attended by Assistant Attorney-General James H. Devlin, representing the Attorney-General, who is on vacation.

HEATED CONTROVERSY.

At times the controversy between the Governor and Attorney Thompson was acrimonious, rising on occasion to a degree of heat seldom witnessed in the executive offices.

At the outset Thompson urged the granting of a respite for Madeiros, sentenced to electrocution for the murder of a Wrentham bank cashier, on the ground that he had confessed to the crime of which Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted, and exonerated them.

Governor Fuller asked the date for the hearing of the new Sacco-Vanzetti trial motion by Judge Thayer and was told by Attorney Thompson that only this morning he requested Assistant District Attorney Dudley Ranney to change it from Sept. 13 to Sept. 15.

LOOKED PECULIAR.

He said Ranney had agreed to this postponement.

The Governor heatedly remarked at this point that it looked peculiar to him that the hearing had been extended beyond the date set for the execution of Madeiros.

"The judge will have to make a recommendation to me," he declared emphatically, "before I'll grant a respite to Madeiros. I'm not going to re-try the cases in this office."

Attorney Thompson stated it would be impossible to argue sooner than Sept. 15. He said there was a mass of evidence for the judge to look over, including a large number of affidavits. His own argument, he insisted would take two days to deliver.

singing through the cables, surprised the Hub, for it was but a scant month ago that Mrs. R. Sohier Welch filed suit for divorce in Paris and since then a rumor of peace in the Welch household had been heard.

But today the attorney and beautiful Mrs. Bowditch, known as "Boston's Perfect Wife," during the nearly 15 years she was the wife of Manfred Bowditch, applied for a license, sure enough, leaving their friends on this side of the Atlantic to speculate.

SPANKED BY EX-MATE.

Mrs. Bowditch's divorce was obtained last January. She is the daughter of Sumner E. Pearmain of No. 258 Beacon street, and was married in September, 1911, to Bowditch, then a Harvard student and on the staff of the Harvard Lampoon. She was a Radcliffe student.

In her divorce action against Bowditch she charged, among other things, that he spanked her mightily. She was awarded custody of the two children, both girls.

Before, and since the divorce, Mrs. Bowditch has been conducting classes of pupils in aesthetic dancing and she herself has been in many shows of the Vincent Club, of which she is a member.

The E. Sohier Welches married life covers seventeen years, with four children resulting. Like the divorcee he intends to wed, the lawyer's first wife is prominent in society of the Hub. She was married to him at the close of his senior year at Harvard, 1909, when she was Barbara Binckley of the younger set.

In her divorce suit, filed in Paris, Mrs. Welch charged desertion.

Billy Sunday Asks 'Where Is Dr. Hall Now?'

RECTOR THE GREATER SINNER OF TWAIN, SAYS EVANGELIST

New York, Aug. 31.—Is Rev. Dr. Hall in Heaven or hell? Rev. Billy Sunday asks. Fate depends on last minute of his life when pistol barked.

(The Boston American presents today the second of a series of articles in which the Rev. W. A. (Billy) Sunday seeks to impress upon the public, with the evangelistic force that he alone possesses, the lessons and the warnings in the dreadful Hall-Mills murder mystery. After you have read this, cut it out and send it to some of your friends. You may know of somebody who needs it.)

By

W. A. Sunday

America's Greatest Evangelist.

"He that covereth his sin shall not prosper: but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy."—Proverbs 28:13.

For a few hours or years we human beings live here in the sunlight, thinking of ourselves, our pleasures, our selfish desires.

Then IN A SECOND THE TIME COMES, and we find ourselves face to face with the black door labeled DEATH.

What then? What do we find on the other side of that door? And what FINDS US when we walk through with our sins upon us, our opportunities neglected, our gratitude for Divine kindness not shown, our hearts as hard as chrome steel, at the very moment when death took us down, and pushed us on?

Where is Dr. Hall?

I deal in these articles with the dreadful mystery, but what is more important, with the lessons of life and death, of sin and of virtue, involved in the mysterious Hall murder case. It will be discussed from one end of this nation to the other, and, pray heaven, it may do good, inducing men and women to think and pray.

How many millions of human beings have asked themselves the question, "Where is Dr. Hall now?" And where is Mrs. Mills, the miserable and unhappy woman that died with him?

Are they burning in hell, in fires that the Bible promises to the wicked?

Were they as the atheists believe, merely like two sinful candle flames, snuffed out, and no more of it? Or have they been taken from this world to another world, where sins are automatically forgiven, because if you please, "we poor human creatures are weak and know no better."

It depends on repentence.

I answer that hell was made for sinners and hell GETS THE SINNERS if unrepentent. The dying thief was saved, he repented.

The Bible is THE WORD OF GOD, and GOD does not delude his children with fairy stories. He warns them, and it is for them to THINK, OBEY, AND SAVE THEMSELVES.

The guilty man and woman found dead side by side, in the blackest sin, were criminals against the laws of God, criminals against the husband of one and the wife of another; they were not two "human candles" to be snuffed out.

Candles are made of wax or tallow, a wick runs through them, soul, life and conscience DO NOT.

When a candle flame goes out, that is the end. But the IMMORTAL flame, the eternal soul that burns in every man and woman, is not the flame of a candle.

Not every man and woman is not the flame of a candle.

It is the creation of God, made to last forever. And it is for the man and for the woman to decide what that eternal existence shall be.

Not for MORTALS to JUDGE.

I deal today with the case of Dr. Hall. It is not for us mortals to estimate guilt or pronounce judgment.

But we know that EVERYTHING DEPENDS ON REPENTANCE.

For I tell you again that the Bible TELLS ONLY THE TRUTH. And it says, BUT WHOSO CONFESSETH AND FORSAKETH HIS SINS SHALL FIND MERCY. It gives even to the vilest sinner a loophole of safety.

Dr. Hall greater sinner.

If two conspire and agree to commit a sin, the strongre of the two is the greater sinner.

The burglar that pushes a little boy over the transom to unlock the door and help commit theft is the greater sinner; the boy is the lesser sinner. The burglar may well meet hell, while the boy meets salvation through repentance.

So with Rev. Dr. Hall and the poor female sinner who sang in his choir, shared in his sin, shared in his death, and went out of the world leaving disgrace and unhappiness behind her.

We must not presume to read the thoughts of God, or to foretell His decisions.

But weak and human as we are, we see the main criminal, in the case.

Dr. Hall was a clergyman preaching the gospel; he had read a thousand times the warning against sin.

Having KNOWLEDGE, he had greater RESPONSIBILITY. Having

700 CALL OFF COAT STRIKE

All but 200 of the striking raincoat workers will return to work tomorrow, having achieved a "complete victory" according to Julius Hochmann, vice-president of the International Garment Workers Union.

"Every demand has been granted," said Hochmann today, "and we are protected by a contract extending to August 15, 1927. A thirty-five per cent. increase in the wages of women workers is the best feature."

The contract calls for a 42-hour week, no work Saturdays or Sundays, and full pay for Labor Day, Columbus Day and May 1, labor holidays, he asserted.

There are 200 strikers still out because a few shops refuse to become "unionized." The 700 returning workers have voted 5 per cent. of their pay for the next two weeks to aid the 200.

Fourteen girl strikers were in a near-panic today when an elevator at No. 11 Beach street stalled between the second and third floors nearly half an hour.

The accident is said to have been caused by the inexperience of the elevator operator.

VERMONTER TO RUN RAIL MAIL SERVICE

Washington, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—Aleyne A. Fisher of Vermont has been appointed general superintendent of the railway mail service succeeding Walter H. Riddell of Illinoise who will be assigned to the position vacated by Mr. Fisher as superintendent of the third division of the service with headquarters here.

FIREMEN SAVE GIRL OF 5

One child was rescued by firemen and members of two families were forced to flee when fire broke out today in the two-family house, No. 99 Arlington street, West Medford.

The blaze, starting in a rubbish barrel outside the rear door, leaped up an exterior stairway, worked its way through the upper apartment to the roof, and then down to the first floor, causing damage estimated at $5,000.

Five-year-old Jessie Diggl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Diggl, occupants of the first floor, was carried through the smoke to safety by firemen. Her parents, together with William S. Phillips, his wife and child, on the second floor, made their way to the street unassisted.

Sparks from the blaze ignited the roof of the house of Mrs. Margaret O'Connell, No. 109 Arlington street, but the resultant fire was extinguished with slight damage.

An automobile was parked near the rubbish barrel, and it is thought this may have caused the fire.

LOS ANGELES IS SAFE IN STORM

Lakehurst, N. J., Aug. 31 (I.N.S.).—The dirigible Los Angeles arrived at its hangar at 4:39 a. m. today after an all-night battle with a severe electrical storm off the Virginia coast.

The Los Angeles, which arrived at Norfolk late yesterday, was not due back here until Wednesday.

The dirigible left her mooring mast on the U. S. S. Patoka, near Cape Charles, at 8 o'clock last night when a squall arose suddenly. The ship's commander deemed it advisable to run before the blow rather than attempt to outride it while under moorings.

The squall was followed by an electrical storm before which the dirigible moved staunchly, and with fair speed.

The dirigible was to have held compass calibrating tests by radio with various wireless stations at Norfolk today.

Lakehurst, N. J., Aug. 31 (A.P.).—A break in the water cooling system of one of the engines of the Navy dirigible Los Angeles occurred today after the giant airship had returned to her hangar from a trip south for compass calibration tests.

The trouble was said to be not serious, but the engine will be removed for repairs. The dirigible will resume her tests tomorrow.

LOVE USED 'TO MAKE MONEY'

Mackay Believes "Always" Was a "Sordid Capitalization" of Berlin's Affection

New York, Aug. 31 (Universal).—A reconciliation believed to be near between Clarence H. MacKay, and the daughter he disowned because she married Irving Berlin, song writer, may be blasted because of a song Berlin wrote thirteen years ago.

It was learned from a close friend of the Berlins today that Clarence Mackay's bitter resentment at the elopement of his daughter had faded rapidly at the prospect of the arrival of a grandchild.

Much of the millionaire's bitter feeling was inspired, not by Berlin's East Side background, as by his belief that he had won and married Ellin that he might capitalize her wealth and position in exploiting songs.

VIEWS ON SONGS.

Mackay believed the song, "Remember," was a capitalization of Irving's proposal to Ellin. He also felt that "Always," released when the Berlins were on the Atlantic, honeymoon-bound, was a sordid capitalization of their love. He had the same opinion of "At Peace With the World."

Mackay had one more stipulation —that Ellin's child be born on on American soil. Arrival of the Berlins in New York cleared away that last obstacle blocking the way to a happy reunion. And then a new cloud loomed.

In 1913 Berlin wrote a song, "Somebody's Coming to My House." The song relates a small boy's naïve ecstacy over the prospective arrival of a baby brother—or sister.

PLANS SONG REVIVAL.

The cover of the song is adorned by a great stork, hovering just above the chimney of a modest home.

And the rub is that Irving Berlin does not control the copyright of this song. It is held by Waterson, Berlin and Snyder and this firm sees a fine chance to make much money by reviving the song at this time.

But Berlin has been warned that a revival of the song might revive Mr. MacKay's opposition and spoil all plans for reconciliation just as they are reported to be nearing fruition.

GIRL WHO FLEW ACROSS U. S. TO BUY A PLANE

pager in Salem, and assistant treasurer of the Lydia Pinkham Company of Lynn, urged more girls to take up flying, but said she thought air conditions over the West coast were safest.

In company with James Luther Adams, Harvard Theological student and pastor's assistant at the Second Unitarian Church, Salem, the young woman, daughter of Mrs. William H. Gove of No. 254 Lafayette street, Salem, flew from Los Angeles to Boston.

Piloted by Charles R. Bowman, former Army aviator, the plane negotiated the distance from the Pacific coast to Boston, with a trip to Portland, Me., and return thrown in for good measure, in thirty-one actual flying hours.

There was no night flying, the air pioneers stopping off at Ashfork, Ariz., Salt Lake City, Omaha, Chicago, Mitchell Field, Boston.

"I never enjoyed such a thrilling experience in my life as I did on this trip," said Miss Gove. "From the time we started from California last Wednesday until we arrived at the East Boston Airport Monday it was a pleasant, interesting trip.

"I did not think that I was doing anything unusual in making the trip from coast to coast. I will say, however, that the only time I was nervous was when we flew from Boston to Portland, Me., and return. We bumped into several air pockets going down and more coming back. At times I was frightened and at times a little seasick.

"If I take up flying permanently I think that I prefer to do it on the West coast. The air pockets around New England appear to be hazardous.

"It was our original plan to land at the Tedesco Country Club at Swampscott and I sent word to my mother that we would arrive about 1 p. m. Monday. After Mr. Bowman, our pilot, had circled over the clubhouse grounds several times he advised against landing as there was not a proper straightaway, and the ground sloped.

TOOK 'MOVIES' IN AIR.

"I have been flying since 1919 both in hydroplanes and airplanes, but I prefer the latter. On our trip to Boston we did a little cooking and also had eat naps at times. We did no night flying. There was room for only three persons in the plane and as there was no windshield we had plenty of air. We even took moving pictures on the way with my small motion picture camera.

"It was most thrilled when we were about two miles in the air above the Grand Canyon. It was the most wonderful experience. Throughout the trip we did not strike any rainy weather and the sky was as clear as crystal."

Miss Gove who is a graduate of Smith College, makes her home with her mother, her father having died six years ago. She is fond of athletic sports, but has not bobbed her hair. She characterized her companion on the flight as a friend of the family and said there was no romance in the trip.

Miss Gove went West several weeks ago in company with her sister-in-law, Mrs. William P. Gove and her three children, and Mr. Adams, who made the trip partly to visit his home at Ritzville, Wash. The young couple made several flights in the West and when the time came to start home, decided to fly. The other members of the party returned by train.

Fumes of Artificial Flowers Overcome N.Y. Firemen

New York, Aug. 1 (A.P.)—Seven firemen were overcome by smoke and fumes from artificial flowers, and cut off from other firemen by flames, while fighting a blaze on the top floor of a six-story building in Greenwich Village early today.

Smoke threatened for a time to halt traffic on the Sixth Avenue Elevated line and crowds in evening clothes swarmed out of cafes to watch the fire fighters.

MILLS GIRL TO REVEAL ALL

Could Charlotte Mills have prevented the murder of her mother, New Jersey choir singer, and the Rev. Dr. Hall, four years ago?

Read her story beginning Thursday in the Boston Evening American.

When the romance-starved Mrs. Mills slipped away from her drab home to keep a tryst with the man she loved too well, she said to her little daughter, Charlotte: "Wait for me, Kid."

Through the years Charlotte has waited, stifling her feelings, her soul torn by the criticism and gossip arising from one of the greatest of American murder mysteries.

At last the flood-gates of silence have broken and for the first time the daughter of the woman who paid for her illicit love affair with her life, has emptied her heart of some of its burden by telling her own story.

PAINTS BACKGROUND.

This story, one of the most absorbing human documents ever written, paints with sure hand the exotic background against which Fate, th- grim jester, moved the figures in the Hall-Mills tragedy.

"Wait for me, Kid, until I come back," Mrs. Mills commanded.

And out of the depths of her misery the 20-year-old girl writes: "I cry until I am sick, sometimes, wondering if I could have kept anything from happening if I had waited, because she did come back to get her scarf—and went out again—and I never saw her again."

"Please dear God, make mother happy and give her some joy in life," the small Charlotte used to pray, and after a time Fate answered her prayer in its own way.

No one should miss a single word of "My Story," by Charlotte Mills. For the first time conditions leading up to the mysterious slaying of Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills and the Rev. Edward W. Hall, are told, and by one thoroughly conversant with them.

FEARED TO TALK.

The author is a prominent figure in the renewed investigation now being made of the four-year-old murder mystery, which has gained international fame.

Charlotte has terrified that for years following the slaying she feared to talk on the threat that she would be sent away.

Now that the girl has reached maturity, she has poured forth the secrets of her soul in a strange narrative of human lives and twisted passions.

This enthralling story begins in the Boston Evening American next Thursday. It will be continued in daily installments thereafter. Don't miss it.

Remember, "My Story," by Charlotte Mills, starting publication Thursday in the Boston Evening American.

Jesus Intercedes for Him.

But God is merciful, although just. And His son, Jesus, who gave His life on the cross and suffered long, horrible hours, forgets and forgives our sin and constantly intercedes for us.

As regards Dr. Hall, who forgot God's words and holy law, the duties of his calling, the vows that he had taken, his case is as simple as that of any criminal walking into the slaughter house.

If he died unrepentant, without looking to God and breathing a prayer for existence, the devil has got him and his eternal home is hell. The Bible tells the truth when it tells us:

And once there he will not escape. The torment that gets to hell is not like the bootlegger that lands in jail. He cannot bribe the jailer; there is no "OUT" for him.

This, I say, answered the question, "Where is Dr. Hall now?"

I do not know whether or not Rev. Dr. Hall had time to cry to God between the time the revolver barked and his death.

If he did have time, and if he did cry for pardon, God would pardon, [illegible]

SOMEBODY MUST PAY.

The money, it was emphasized, will have to be paid by the American taxpayers unless it is paid by the taxpayers of the countries that borrowed it.

The President, it was said, respects the sincerity, judgment and patriotism of Mr. Baker, yet he realizes it is sometimes easier for a person in private life, no longer charged with the responsibility of administering public affairs, to suggest large expenditures of the taxpayers' money than it is for those responsible for the collection of money or payment of it out of the taxpayers' pockets.

SEES NO COURT CHANGE.

No likelihood of the Senate reversing itself on the question of American entrance to the permanent court of international justice is seen by President Coolidge, who considers that question settled.

While it was said Mr. Coolidge did not know of the attitude of Senators Gooding, Republican, Idaho, and Trammell, Democrat, Florida, who voted for American adherence to the court, and now have changed their views, it was remarked that this would be just as well to wait until after the Fall elections and see what the final attitude of those in public office may be on the matter.

The President, it was emphasized is expecting "no change."

Paul Smith,'s, N. Y., Aug. 31 (A.P.)—The action of President Coolidge will take on the bill of the Philippine Legislature providing for a plebiscite in the islands on the question of independence cannot be indicated at this.

The President, it was said today, will take it up when it comes to him and give it careful consideration.

The measure was passed finally over the veto of Governor-General Wood.

Coolidge Opposes Sale of Ship to Fly Foreign Flag

LIVE SUSPECTS AND DEAD BANDITS IN MORGUE

Chicago, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—A "show-up" in the county morgue, with a wounded youth and his fiancee beside their two slain companions in a robbery attempt, was the device by which police today hoped to clear up more than a hundred other hold-ups.

Belief that victims might more easily identify the bandits if the four were seen together led detectives to decide on the unusual procedure.

The wounded man was Earnest De Lavergne, twenty-five, and a brother of Joseph De Lavergne, one of the two killed in an attempt to rob a carbarn. The other victim of police bullets was William Maloney, ex-convict.

200 DROWN ON RUSSIAN SHIP

Cronstadt, Russia, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—Estimates of the loss of life in the sinking of the steamer Narvastnik today continued to grow. It is now reported that more than 200 of the 563 passengers aboard were drowned in the foundering of the craft off the exit of the ship canal on Sunday night.

This little island fortress is plunged in sorrow as most of the victims of the disaster were residents. They were chiefly workmen and their families returning from a holiday in Leningrad.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO'S OWN STORY OF HIS LIFE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Born and brought up in Italy, Valentino was graduated from the Royal Academy of Agriculture with the idea of becoming a landscape gardener. Lack of funds forced him to abandon an ambition to attend the naval academy. Tired of life in a little town, he ran away to Paris and Monte Carlo and returned home a prodigal. His family then sent him to America. Here he learned to dance, discovered he must earn some money, went to work for a landscape gardener, lost a few jobs and finally landed in Central Park as a tramp, where he slept all night. Seeking a waiter's position, he became a dancer. After a tour of cabarets and vaudeville, he joined a musical comedy company and reached California. After many efforts he is given a chance before the camera. Then he gets a real part.

CHAPTER 6—FIRST SUCCESSES.

(Reprinted from Photoplay Magazine by permission of James R. Quirk, the editor. Copyright by Photoplay Publishing Company)

Again Emmet Flynn came to my rescue. He hesitated to offer an "extra" part after I had played a lead; however he finally ventured the question, "Will you play an Italian Bowery tough in my picture?" he asked.

"I will play anything," I said, delighted to get the seven-fifty a day.

Incidentally, Emmet kept me on the payroll for the entire production, even though I didn't work every day. Such are the things a fellow doesn't forget.

From Bowery tough I suddenly became a prince charming of the middle ages.

MAE MURRAY'S LEAD

This sudden transition came about through Mae Murray and her husband, Bob Leonard. They had known me in New York. When I reached home I received a telephone call offering me the role of leading man in "The Big Little Person" with Mae.

For the next picture, "The Delicious Little Devil," starring Mae, I again had the leading role.

The following picture offered nothing for me. The hero was a young American woodsman.

While he couldn't see me in that part, Bob Leonard liked me and had approved of my work in the other two pictures.

Thus I met Paul Powell, who was to direct Carmel Myers in "A Society Sensation." He was very nice. "Go and have a talk with the manager," he said, "and tell him I said that you were the man for the part."

I landed the part and a salary of $125 a week. Paul Powell liked me. He was the first one to say, "stick to it and you will make a name for yourself some day." It was wonderful encouragement that I never forgot.

Paul liked me so much in "A Society Sensation" that he engaged me for his next production, "All Night." His size was instrumental in getting me a raise to $150 a week.

THEN CAME 'FLU'

I had finished this picture and was looking around for another chance when the epidemic of the Spanish "flu" broke out. All the studios were shut down and there wasn't a ghost of a chance of getting anything. So I went to San Francisco to visit some friends. Upon my return I came down with the disease.

When I regained my strength after a careful diet of fruits and broth, I started making the rounds of the studios.

Finally Earle Williams offered me a "bit," doing an Apache dance in "The Rogue's Romance."

James Young, who directed Williams, was also fine to me—in fact wonderful.

My next engagement was with Ince, in support of Dorothy Dalton. When the picture was finally been edited for the market, I found myself in just exactly one scene. But I had earned seventy-five dollars a week, and that was most welcome at the time.

Consider the thrill that went over me, then, when I received a call from D. W. Griffith.

Not since the day back in Italy when I ran away to see the King had I been so excited.

Previously I had met Mr. Griffith. After completing "All Night" at Universal, Paul Powell had given me a letter of introduction. Mr. Griffith received me and chatted with me for several minutes. All the time he was looking straight over my head.

When he said, "we haven't anything for you now, but leave your pictures," I wondered how he could know whether he had anything for me or not since he hadn't even given me a glance. But I found out afterwards that such is his regular manner. He must have a third eye concealed about him somewhere.

Mr. Griffith kept me in mind, and when he presented "The Greatest Thing in Life" at the Auditorium in Los Angeles, I was engaged to dance with Carol Dempster in a prologue.

I worked for two or three months, receiving a hundred dollars a week, and when "Scarlet Days" was shown at the Grauman Theatre I was engaged to do a dance as a prologue to that film.

It was at a party at Pauline Frederick's that I met Miss Jean Acker. I thought her very attractive. But I did not see her again for some time.

While completing work in "Once to Every Woman," starring Dorothy Phillips, I again met Miss Acker. I fell in love with her.

And then—I asked her to be my wife. She made me very happy by accepting. I had been unutterably lonely. Above all else I longed for a friend.

When we returned to Hollywood Hotel where she was stopping, we met Mae Allison and Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Karger. We told them we were going to be married the very next day.

The Kargers were living a farewell party that evening to Richard Rolland, president of Metro, who was returning to New York. Mr. Karger suggested that we procure our license and turn the party into a wedding.

That was the way we rushed through the romance.

After the ceremony, we had supper and danced until two.

Then my bride left me.

I had saved a thousand dollars, my first attempt at saving, while working in "Once to Every Woman." This soon disappeared after I had paid the various expenses attending the wedding.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Interest of Society Tennis Followers Centers On Longwood This Week

TENNIS MOVES GAILY ABOUT THE SOCIAL map as a fashionably athletic diversion, and this week holds centre stage locally at Longwood. National champions and near-champions (all of the masculine persuasion) are gathered there in bewildering profusion, and naturally there society flocks, for society is always devoted to tennis.

BENEATH A WELLNIGH CLOUDLESS SKY, and with sparkling sunlight, the galleries at Longwood were a picture of summertime color on the opening day, as devotees of this fascinating sport followed with breathless interest their favorite racqueter.

IT'S A FAVORITE WAY of perfecting one's own technique, this absorbed watching of a champion's play, and always where the net headliners are there may be found Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer. She, be it known, is a clever performer on the courts, and shines with much local fame.

MISS EDITH SIGOURNEY, who but infrequently graces the Boston social scene (she follows the matches both here and abroad assiduously) was another amateur of local fame who always may be found in the gallery when not playing herself.

THE REDOUBTABLE "ELEO" SEARS put in the briefest of stays at Longwood, following a hasty return from Newport where she made a Casino appearance on the courts with no less a partner than the King of the Courts, "Bill" Tilden.

MISS JOSEPHINE JEWELL, pretty bud of the past winter and a younger set adornment, was in the stands, wearing a smart affair of deep rose. It was a tube-like knitted frock, snug as to collar and topped by a snug little hat.

TENNIS IS the main attraction for each day this week, with a crowded program of National Men's Doubles. A program which Boston names shine with much lustre—such as J. Brooks Fenno, Josiah Wheelwright, Henry L. Johnson and Nathaniel W. Niles. As for the out-of-towners, they are a glittering galaxy.

BOSTON FAMILY connections of Miss Lucretia Goddard will watch with vast interest that young girl's debut in mid-October with the San Carlo opera company. Vivacious and talented, athletic and devoted to her art, Miss Goddard makes her debut at the tender age of seventeen.

ENTRIES FOR the Myopia Horse Show, annual Labor Day sporting event of the North Shore, include all those favorite Myopians. A brilliant spectacle of horsemanship and action always brings out a record gallery. The Forbes stables, the Ayer, Miss Mary Curtis's and Miss the Tuckermans and the Lawrences, Alice Thorndike's, to say nothing of have entrants.

LABOR DAY and its horse show is the introit to a long autumn of M[illegible] riding to hounds, a sport which was gaily on just as long as the trails and roads of that splendid natural hunting country remain passable.

'Mother Machree' To Be Irish Film Epic

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 31.—The Fox Studios present the appearance of an army just about to attack the enemy. Everything is in readiness for work and more work. With fifteen companies assembled for production activities I think I am safe in saying film entertainment, so far as the Fox Company is concerned, is at high tide.

In my visit at this studio I was particularly impressed with the "Mother Machree" sets. I should not be surprised if John Ford creates something of a stir with this Irish epic.

His parents were both born in Ireland and those rose-covered cottages he has created with the chickens, ducks and sheep wandering about is a replica of the Galway he has had described to him all his life.

Belle Bennett plays Mother Machree and for the time being she has donned a black wig, which makes her look so different I had difficulty in recognizing her. Neil Hamilton, I have heard it whispered, will play the juvenile lead opposite Blanche Mehaffey.

Mary Philbin

DOES GEORGE SEIGMANN ever have a vacation? It doesn't look that way.

He may be located for the next few weeks at Universal Studios, where he is playing the role of Tarzan in "The Bargain Bride," Mary Philbin's next picture. It is an American title chosen in place of "Les Lyon," the original French play.

WE ARE SO BUSY TALKING about production that often we fail to realize the importance of distribution.

Apropos of this, I was interested to hear George M. Weeks, general manager of distribution for Paramount Pictures, who has just come from New York, say that in the increasing importance of the international phase of the motion picture distribution is the outstanding development of the film industry today.

"The time has passed when pictures can be made purely for home consumption. They are the new and only international language."

WILLIAM WRIGLEY will have at least one motion picture contender for the $25,000 prize he is offering for the swimming race to Catalina Christmas Day.

George K. Arthur, who won all sorts of trophies in swimming matches in England, has already announced that he will try for the prize.

JULANNE JOHNSTONE'S dancing is doing service these days for in "Twinkletoes." Colleen Moore's present picture, she plays the part of a dancer.

If Julanne had not been invited to play the leading role in "The Thief of Bagdad," with Douglas Fairbanks, the indications are that she would have cultivated her dancing and taken it up seriously as a profession.

"THE MUD TURTLE" is to be brought to the screen by the Fox Company. I understand they purchased the rights from Famous Players-Lasky and will hand it to John Griffith Wray for his next production.

"The Mud Turtle," which flourished for a time on Broadway, is still being used by Helen McKellar as a vaudeville sketch. It should make a good picture as it has romance and action.

DELAY PEACE IN COAL STRIKE

Manchester, Eng., Aug. 31 (I.N.S.)—Refusal of the Midlothian parish council to grant poor law allowances to striking coal miners led to serious rioting during the night. The police were forced to resort to baton charges to break up rioting miners, order was restored after the Midlothian council agreed to grant an allowance of 50 cents to each miner.

London, Aug. 31.—The government sees no signs of an early settlement of the British coal strike, Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Minister, declared in the House of Commons today, and that body voted to adjourn at 5 o'clock this afternoon until November 9.

J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Labor party, had proposed that Commons adjourn until September 7, in the hope that there might be a peace proposal to discuss at that time.

MacDonald assailed the government and its policy with regard to the strike, alleging that the Cabinet is favoring the operators and has favored them throughout the struggle. He urged government negotiations to end the strike.

Churchill described the failure of the two sides to get together as "the most melancholy and ignominious breakdown of British common sense ever exhibited."

MOTHER OF FIVE VANISHES; TAKES ONE BABE WITH HER

Police were asked today to search for Mrs. Josephine Busino, who disappeared from her home, Parr's street, East Boston, taking her nine-months-old baby with her and leaving four other children behind.

Her husband, Antonio Busino, told the police he went to New York in response to information that she was at an address there, but found she had just left. The children left motherless by her absence are Anthony, nine; Rose, seven; Dante, six, and Margaret, three.

MEXICAN STATE ROCKED BY HEAVY EARTHQUAKE

Quick Quizzes on the Movies

By BARBARA BENTON

P. S., BOSTON.— Your favorites in "The Love Thief" are Willy Fritsch, Mady Christians and Xenia Desni—they are all located with the German production company known as UFA. Though their releases are made mostly across the water, they have a New York branch as does almost every film concern under the sun. It is UFA—Filma, Inc., 1540 Broadway.

G. G., BOSTON.—Theda Bara made a film called "Cleopatra." Batty Blythe starred in "The Queen of Sheba." I think you are pretty safe in assuming that nothing else under these titles have ever been produced in the films.

"SEMIE," WALTHAM.—Here are the "weights and measures," etc., on William Collier, Jr. He is about five feet, six inches tall, weighs about 138 pounds, black hair and eyes. He is now making a picture called "The Charleston Kid," at First National Studios, 807 East 175th street, New York City. Address Viola Dana in care of F. B. O., 780 Gower street, Hollywood, Cal.; Greta Nissen in care of Famous Players-Lasky Corp., 1520 Vine street, Hollywood. Yes, indeed! Come again.

A. B., SOMERVILLE.—Don't despair. Richard Dix is not married as [illegible] time [illegible] the chances are, never was. His new picture will be "The Quarterback," for Famous Players. I believe he is sick right now, but nothing serious is reported.

"CURIOUS," WINTHROP. — Your question about Pola Negri was answered in yesterday's "Quick Quizzes." Madge Bellamy was "Sandy" in the William Fox production of that name.

TWO MORE ARRESTED IN BANK ROBBERY KILLING

Oklahoma City, Okla, Aug. 31 (I. N. S.)—Owen Edwards and Roy Brandon, charged with being members of the gang that robbed two banks at Covington last week, were under arrest at Sapulpa today.

They live at Bristow, the home of George and Mathew Kimes who were arrested in Arkansas Saturday and who confessed to the robbery and the killing of Perry Chuculate, a Sallisaw officer.

Dead in Hallway

Henry Schacht, 69 years old, was found unconscious today in the first floor hallway of his home, Tileston street, North End, and died a short time after being taken to the Haymarket Relief Hospital. Police are investigating the death.

37 NATIONS TO VOTE ON U. S. IN WORLD COURT

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—Thirty-seven of the forty-eight members of the Permanent Court of International Justice have accepted invitations to participate in tomorrow's conference expected to act definitely on the issue whether the United States shall become a member of the Court.

The fifth reservation to American adherence as adopted by the United States Senate is causing the greatest difficulty. Under this reservation the Court would be estoped from the delivery of advisory opinions without the consent of the United States on matters touching any dispute in which the United States has or claims an interest.'

Viscount Cecil of Great Britain today had luncheon with U. S. Senator Claude A. Swanson of Virginia and Representative Theodore E. Burton of Ohio and informally discussed the American reservations.

SPAIN AND TANGIER.

Spain's frank official avowal that, if she were given a protectorate over Tangier she would not insist on her claim for a permanent seat in the league council, has provoked a sensation in league circles, where it now is openly predicted Spain will resign.

It is remarked that the most Great Britain and France can say to Spain is that, if a Tangier conference is convoked, they would be disposed to back the Spanish claim. (A Paris dispatch today said the French reply rejected the Spanish demand that Tangier be included in Spanish Morocco.)

U. S. STAND AWAITED.

Considerable interest is manifest as to the attitude of the American government toward any attempt officially to reopen the Tangier problem.

Definite progress was reported at the end of this morning's session of the sub-committee of the commission charged with studying reorganization of the League of Nations' Council.

Dr. Motta of Switzerland, who presided, said the members had agreed upon principles and had delegated M. Fromageot of France to prepare a new text.

BIG CALIFORNIA ISSUE TODAY IS COURT

San Francisco, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—National issues and figures shared the spotlight with local personalities and problems as balloting began in California's primary today.

The World Court, the tariff and Coolidge were keynotes of the contest for United States senator, in which Samuel M. Shortridge, incumbent, is opposed by Robert M. Clarke and Representative Walter F. Lineberger.

Shortridge, seeking a second term on a platform of protective tariff for California products, has stressed his consistent support of President Coolidge and the Republican platform. Clarke, backed by Hiram Johnson, has made his campaign on an anti-world court platform.

Lineberger also has attacked Shortridge's vote for the World Court, and stresses, in addition, his own advocacy of strict prohibition enforcement. He is indorsed by the Anti-Saloon League.

SEE TAMMANY PLOT.

Nine candidates brought the governorship, Governor Thomas G. McLeod not being among them.

Representatives Britten, Stevenson and Follmer have opposition for Congress.

In the Republican gubernational contest Lieut. Gov. C. C. Young, class author supported by Senator Johnson, opposes Friend W. Richardson.

Fred Goodsell, former collector of internal revenue at Los Angeles, is among other candidates opposing Richardson.

Tammany was the issue on which candidates for the Democratic Gubernatorial and Senatorial nominations locked horns. It was injected into the campaign by John B. Elliott, backed by William Gibbs McAdoo, for Senator. Elliott and Carl Alexander Johnson, the McAdoo candidate for Governor, accused their opponents, Isadore Dockweiler and Justus R. Wardell of furthering a Tammany Hall plot to capture the Democratic Party and insure Governor Al Smith the Presidential nomination in 1928.

PROHIBITION ISSUE, TOO.

Dockweiler and Wardell, indorsed for Senator and Governor by a preprimary conference of Democrats, retorted that Elliott and Johnson are but pawns in McAdoo's plan to win in 1928 the Presidential nomination.

Modification or repeal of prohibition was a major issue in some of the congressional districts.

Court Also Big Issue In Southern Carolina Today

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 31 (A.P.)—American adherence to the World Court was one of the issues which voters of South Carolina passed upon today in expressing their choices for Senator, Governor and others in the first Democratic primary.

Ellison D. Smith, three times a Senator, entered the three-cornered battle with former Senator N. B. Dial of Laurens and Lieut. A. Brooks of Barnwell. Brown denounced the World Court as a "Republican creation," disdainful of the League Court, endorsed by Woodrow Wilson. He criticized Smith's vote in favor of American participation.

Rudolph Valentino in "The Son of the Sheik" will hold the center of the new program at Loew's State next week.

Thomas Meighan in "Tin Gods" will be shown at the Metropolitan for one week starting Saturday, Sept. 11.

Blanche Sweet in "Diplomacy" is announced as the attraction at the Metropolitan starting Saturday, Sept. 18.

EDERLE FILMS SET RECORD

New York, Aug. 31.—While Trudy Ederle's home block was paying homage to its heroine, International Newsreel with accustomed enterprise was showing motion pictures in Broadway theatres of the unprecedented reception extended to the Channel swimmer by the metropolis.

All records for speed were broken by the International in getting to New York theatres the films made at Quarantine, showing Miss Ederle on the Berengaria and her official welcome by city officials and others.

As soon as the ceremonies at Quarantine were over and Miss Ederle had been taken off the Berengaria by the Macon, an International seaplane carried all the film from Quarantine to a landing off Broadway, Long Island City, in the East River. There the film was transferred to a motorboat, taken ashore and rushed to the International laboratory a few blocks away. The trip from Quarantine, of Staten Island, to Long Island City laboratory was made in twenty-two minutes.

FEAR 3 BLOWN TO SEA IN GALE

Biddeford, Me., Aug. 31 (A.P.)—Blown to sea by a heavy northwest wind, their friends believe, Harold Ferrand, Cacc; Joseph Dumont and Joseph Martin, Biddeford, have been missing from their homes since Monday.

Coast guardsmen along the western Maine coast, have been keeping a lookout for them, but without success.

The three men started out in a motorboat for a fishing trip off Wood Island. A heavy wind sprung up during the day and continued during the greater part of the night. When they did not return the coast guard at the Fletcher Neck station were notified.

The coast guardsmen cruised the ocean from Saco Bay to Cape Porpoise today, but without finding a trace of the men or a disabled boat.

FEAR FOR YOUNG TROUT AS N. H. BROOKS DRY UP

Exeter, N. H. Aug. 31.—Low water in the brooks and streams in this section is preventing fish and game Warden Russell O. Thorsell from distributing 18,000 trout fingerlings, which were intended to stock the streams.

In many places the water is so low, because of lack of rainfall, that a large supply of trout fingerlings distributed earlier in the Summer are endangered.

PORTLAND CHILD'S DEATH DUE TO AUTO INJURIES

Portland, Me., Aug. 31.—Four-year-old June Hendrick died today as result of being struck by an automobile at Brunswick last Friday, she ran from her mother, Mrs. Elmer R. Hendrick, into the path of a car and her skull was fractured.

Scow Burns; Two Dead

New York, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—Two persons one of whom is believed to have been a woman, were burned to death today in a fire which wrecked a scow moored to a bulk head in the Harlem River at One Hundred and Seventy-sixth street.

EDITOR DEATH PROBE 'KEY MAN' SLAIN

Cleveland, O., Aug. 31 (A.P.)—Investigation into the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher, took a new turn today, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer, with the report that evidence of the murder of Patrick Eugene McDermott, missing "key man" of the investigation, had been uncovered.

It was said that statements of a woman living in a town near Canton indicated McDermott was murdered July 28 and that his body was shipped to New York in a trunk.

The clue led deeper into the underworld and implicated "higher-ups," who, investigators feel, laid the plot against the crusading publisher.

According to the woman's story, two shots were fired in a house adjoining hers on the night of July 28, and later a truck was driven to the house and a trunk was taken to a railroad station.

"BODY SENT TO NEW YORK."

Investigation has revealed, it was said, that a trunk was sent to New York on that date and statements of a man living in the house in which the shots are said to have been fired that his sister went to New York and that the trunk contained her clothes, have been proved untrue.

Cleveland authorities have redoubled their search for Mrs. Catherine Mellett forty-one. In whose rooming house McDermott is believed to have lived as Charles Connor after the Mellett slaying. McDermott was said to have received a telegram while living there and to have left shortly afterward.

It is believed the telegram lured him to his death.

The telegram was said to be in the hands of the authorities.

GRAND JURY PROBE.

Mrs. Barnes, with Peggy Cavanaugh, 23, and Thelma Davis, 19, who knew McDermott, disappeared at the beginning of the Grand Jury investigation of the Mellett slaying. The Grand Jury is expected to report Friday.

Investigators insist they have placed before the jury indictable evidence against three men and possibly four. Rumors of jury tampering will be investigated, and it is possible charges of perjury may be placed against several witnesses.

'POWDER PUFF' AT WALDRON'S

Boston is now enjoying its first glimpse of the "bigger, better and busier burlesque" with the "Powder Puff Frolic" at Waldron's Casino.

And Boston pronounces it good. The show, from the minute the 24 Broadway girls file into view until the final curtain, is full of laughs. There is action every moment, and the comedians move with a step in advance of previous burlesque.

In addition, two feature pictures and several vaudeville acts are offered, in keeping with the three-in-one policy of the Hanover street playhouse.

It is unusual to have three comedians of the same type in any show, but Billy Fields, Ernie Mack and Bert Fay, a "trinity of tramps," keep the audience in an uproar. Mabel Sloan, champion woman baseball player, puts over some new baseball stories. Little Marie Autry, singer of blues, catches the fancy of the audience and is accordingly encored. Corinne Royce and Victoria Youngman, soubrettes sing several bright songs and afford the chorus a chance to show its many costumes.

EXCELLENT BILL IS OFFERED AT KEITH'S

Ruby Norton, offering a collection of ballads and jazz songs, with Clarence Senna, master pianist, top an excellent Summer bill at B. F. Keith's this week.

George Bostick's presentation "Amateur Nite in London" is one of the "laughingest" sketches ever seen. Jane Barber and Jerome Jackson have a smart skit, while Frank Richardson scored heavily with his song hits. George Griffin and Company offer an entertaining revue.

The Three Kemmys, Sylvia Loyal and her prize French Poodles, Jimmy Nervo and Teddy Knox, and the Misses Stanton and Dolores complete the bill.

E. BOSTON MAN BEATEN, ROBBED BY THREE THUGS

Attacked by three men, James J. Lee, who lodges at No. 145 Lexington street, East Boston, was robbed of $90 today at Putnam and Lexington streets.

Lee reported to the police that the trio knocked him down with blows on the jaw and then one went through his pockets, while the others held him. He described one of the men as thirty-five and the other two twenty-five years old, and all wore dark clothing and caps.

Coming Events

George Jessel in "The Jazz Singer" will start the new season at the Hollis next Saturday.

"The Daring Duchess," for the first time on the American stage, will take possession of the Wilbur next Monday.

Harry Houdini, the man of baffling mysteries, will open the new season at the Majestic next Monday.

"Lass of Laughter" will be Mr. Clive's first venture at the Copley, starting Monday, Sept. 12.

Al Jolson, fresh from a gay vacation in Europe, will bring his seasonally popular "Big Boy" to the Shubert on Monday, Sept. 13th.

"Pigs," a comedy romance, which already has upset New York and Chicago with its humor, will be the opening attraction at the New Park, taking the stage at that playhouse next Monday.

FINE PROGRAM AT ORPHEUM

Jazz in both quantity and quality fills the new bill at Loew's Orpheum this week. In both photoplay and vaudeville there is a futuristic tempsody that sets the heart palpitating and the knees quivering. This picture is Ernst Lubitsch's "Forbidden This Is Paris" and is one of the gayest and smartest of the many fine pictures this director has made.

The story is a saucy, diverting tale of frivolous, fun-loving Paris, where night life continues until the sun climbs over the Eastern horizon. It is a mixture of amours and husbands and wives—all fervently in love with someone. Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller are the featured players, with Lilyan Tashman also taking a pleasing part.

The vaudeville bill presents as its top line Sid Hall and His Entertainers. In a word it is a jazz orchestra specialtises in rhythmic syncopation. Others on the bill are Angel and Fuller, in a blending of music and chatter; Jack Janis and Company in a comedy skit called "The Woman Pays," and France and LaPell in aerial acrobatics.

'MIDNIGHT SUN' AT STATE IS ENTERTAINING

Foreign film directors continue to embellish the screen with novelty in the cinema art.

In "The Midnight Sun" at Loew's State this week, Dmitri Buchowetzki shows masterful treatment of a somewhat commonplace story—the erstwhile Russian court cropping out again—and lifts it high above the usual program picture.

His principals, "prospekts," dungeons and all his scenes seem to be taken from the actual places they represent without a suggestion of studio carpentry. His photography effects are soft and smooth whether in glaring close-up or "long shot" of a moonlit garden.

Besides these pleasant revelations in camera-craft, it is born upon the spectator that the star of the film, Lura La Plante, is discovered with rare talent as a light comedienne. Though the stronger hand of melodrama gets a grip on the proceedings on many occasions, by far the most enjoyable moments occur when Miss La Plante ceases to "emote."

Her flirtations with the handsome Grand Duke (Pat O'Malley in a moustache for the sake of villainy) and brave officers of the Imperial Guard are delightfully coquettish.

On the stage at the State, Ace Brigode's "Virginian," "the South's hottest band," plays pulse-quickening music and is warmly applauded by the audience. Other stage features and short screen subjects complete the bill.

FLAHERTY TO SEE COOLIDGE ON MEXICO

K. of C. Head to Present Intervention Plea to President in Person

Paul Smith's, N. Y., Aug. 31 (A.P.)—James E. Flaherty, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, will be received by President Coolidge tomorrow for a discussion of the order calling for American intervention in Mexico to protect Catholic churchmen in their religious dispute with President Calles in that country.

The appointment was made at the request of M rFlaherty after he had conferred with Secretary Kellogg of the State Department at Washington.

The results of the Washington discussions have not been made public, but it was made clear at the Summer White House at the time that if Mr. Flaherty desired to see Mr. Coolidge after the meeting with Mr. Kellogg, he would be given an appointment.

The policy of the Washington government toward Mexico has been made clear as one of "hands off," unless American citizens are injured in person or property.

Catholics See Little Hope of Relief in Congress

Mexico City, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—On the day before the convening of Congress the prospect from the Catholic viewpoint, continues gloomy for any relief by the legislative body in the nature of repeal or amendment of the religious clauses of the constitution or of the regulations giving effect to the clauses.

For four weeks by order of the Catholic episcopate, there have been no regular services presided over by priests in Catholic churches throughout the republic.

The order was issued as a protest against the imposition of the regulations by President Calles, which are regarded by the church as infringing its rights. President Calles has declared throughout the controversy that it is his purpose to see that the law is obeyed.

As matters now stand, Congress apparently supports General Calles

DAZED WOMAN PICKED UP

An eighty-year-old woman, in a dazed condition, protected by only a thin, white nightgown, was found wandering about Dunreath street, Roxbury, early today by a milkman.

Taken to the Dudley street police station, the woman said her name was Margaret French, that she was a widow, born in France and was visiting friends in the city. She was stopping at the home of W. J. Riley, a furniture dealer, but did not know the address. She was taken to the City Hospital by Patrolmen Cunningham and Bartel to be treated for exposure.

The police were mystified to account for the woman's presence on the street, except that she may have been sleep walking. She could not aid them in any way.

Actress Wouldn't Say 'H---'; Guess What Boss Said!

London, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—The use of a word with four letters, meaning an extremely hot place described in the Bible, was considered so indelicate by May Moore Dupres at the opening of a new revue that she declined to utter it.

"You go to ——," was the line she was to have spoken, but when the time came she merely said, in a weak voice, "you may go wherever you like."

Miss Dupres was showered with bouquets for her stand but the producer now is talking about a "broken contract."

Boy Takes Own Life After Gun Kills Sister

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 31 (A.P.)—Arthur Lawrence, fifteen, voluntarily paid with his life for what he thought was inexcusable carelessness on his part.

The boy went to the barn on his mother's farm and killed himself with a shotgun which a moment before had killed his eleven-year-old sister, Elenore.

Young Lawrence was cleaning the weapon when it was discharged accidentally. The charge ripped through the kitchen door, killing the girl instantly.

SHOTS HALT 2 BOYS IN TRUCK

A chase along the Revere Beach parkway reservation during which several shots were fired in the air resulted in the capture of two sixteen-year-old East Boston boys, charged with stealing an ice cream truck.

The boys who were captured by Officer Edwin Streeter, of the Metropolitan police, near the Everett line, were turned over to the East Boston police, charged with larceny of an automobile, the property of the National Ice Cream Co. of East Boston.

They gave their names as Rocco Frontuto, sixteen, of No. 76 Brooks street, East Boston, and Walter McKinnon, sixteen, of No. 172 Border street, same place.

According to the police, the two boys were watching the truck, which was being loaded with ice cream in front of the company's office in London street, East Boston. When they saw their chance, Frontuto is alleged to have jumped onto the seat and started the truck. McKinnon occupied the front seat also.

They whisked out of London street and started towards Revere. Word of the theft of the big truck was immediately flashed to the East Boston police who in turn notified all surrounding police stations. Officer Streeter received the number of the stolen truck at roll call and several hours later he saw the truck speeding along the parkway.

He gave chase on his motorcycle and in an effort to frighten the driver of the truck fired several shots. The chase continued until the Everett line was reached when Streeter rode in front of the truck and ordered the operator to stop.

POPE'S HORSES STRANGELY POISONED; 1 DEAD, 5 SICK

Rome, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—One horse belonging to the stable of Pope Pius has died and several others presumably have been poisoned during the past few days. An investigation was started to ascertain the cause of the illness of the animals and it is said that this showed an intestinal trouble brought on by "something found mixed in the fodder given the animals." Five of the horses are seriously ill.

The matter is being investigated further in an endeavor to ascertain who placed the "something" in the fodder.

MEXICAN COLONEL IS EXECUTED AS PLOTTER

Nunez was held responsible for an attack on a train near Guadalajara last January and with having taken the loot of several of the passengers and train crew.

RODGERS LAID TO REST IN ARLINGTON

Washington, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—Full military honors were arranged by the Navy Department as its farewell today to the last of that long line of "John Rodgers" who had given their lives in the service of the United States.

A year to the day after the giant seaplane PN-9, under his command, had risen from San Pablo Bay, Cal., in the now famous attempt to span the Pacific to Hawaii by air, Commander John Rodgers, victim of a crash last Friday at Philadelphia, was laid in his final restful place in Arlington National Cemetery.

In the ancestral home at Havre de Grace, Md., brief funeral services were held yesterday. Admiral John Rodgers, retired, the seventy-eight year-old father, and his wife, who is seventy-two, showed their keen sorrow but bore up well.

Captain Curtis H. Dickins, Chaplain Corps, U. S. N., and Canon P. J. Bohanon of the Washington Cathedral, conducted the official rites today. The pallbearers were Captain George C. Westervelt, manager of the Naval Aircraft factory at Philadelphia; Commanders Holden C. Richardson and Kenneth Whiting, Bureau of Aeronautics; Commander Frederick V. McNair, Army War College; Captain Samuel M. Robinson, Bureau of Engineering; Commander Martin K. Metcalf, Naval Examining Board; Captain Ralph Koch, Bureau of Navigation, and Captain Stephen Rowan, Naval Operations.

HUSBAND'S LOVE WORTH $5500 A MONTH

Chicago Aug. 31 (A.P.)—A value of $5,500 a month is placed by Miriam Noel Wright on the society of her husband, Frank Lloyd Wright, architect.

She has brought suit for $100,000 damages against Olga Milanoff, Russian dancer, charging that for 18 months she has been deprived of her husband's companionship and entrance to their home due to the dancer's influence.

Since December, 1924, Mrs. Wright has ceased to love her, Mrs. Wright declared in her bill, her latest legal move since she was barred from Taliesen, Wright's villa near Spring Green, Wis., early in June.

At that time she charged that Miss Milanoff was in the house, and in the alienation suit she asserted that the dancer persuaded Wright to oust her from Taliesen and by "false representations contrived to keep her away" from the home.

The suit charged that Wright was father of a child, which she alleged was born to the dancer in Chicago, December 1, 1925. In a declaration accompanying her suit she spoke of the loss of "the comfort, fellowship, love, affection, society and assistance" of her husband, which she attributed to the dancer's "youth, feminine charm and attractions, insidious and persistent wiles and machinations."

ARRESTS LOOM IN HER 'SURGERY' DEATH

SECRET AUTOPSY IS CONDUCTED

Mrs. Helen Jelmberg of Gloucester, who died while visiting at the home of Mrs. Herbert Grant in Rockport, was a victim of illegal surgery, Medical Examiner Moore has found in a secret autopsy. Arrests are expected to result.

PROBE DEATH OF WOMAN

Gloucester, Aug. 31. — Arrests were expected to follow the decision of Medical Examiner Philip T. Moore that Mrs. Helen Jelmberg of this city came to her death as the result of illegal surgery.

Mrs. Jelmberg died in Rockport last Tuesday while visiting at the home of Mrs. Herbert Grant. At first it was thought she had died as the result of an accident. A secret autopsy was performed and the result forwarded to District Attorney Clark, who ordered State Officer Murray to reopen the investigation and make arrests if evidence warrants.

KNOX SAYS WIFE DIDN'T CUT HIM

Washington, Aug. 31 (A.P.).—Philander Knox, Jr., son of the former Secretary of State and United States Senator from Pennsylvania, took issue today with the police report which credited his wife, Mrs. Josephine Poole Knox, with having thrown a water glass at him early Sunday and cutting his right arm.

Knox said that the real cause of his injury, which had sent him to a hospital, was a slip on the wet bathroom floor while he had a glass in his hand and was seeking a drink of water.

"There is no marital trouble at all," Knox said.

"If the police say that there had been an altercation, they are jumping to conclusions."

Meanwhile the police maintained that their version of the incident is correct.

About 18 months ago Mrs. Knox left her husband and placed him "on probation." Some six months later they were reconciled. They have been married since 1917.

24 POLICE HUNT LONE BURGLAR

Twenty-four patrolmen; all members of the night force of the Somerville division, went on duty today in plain clothes in West Somerville, in an effort to trap the man believed responsible for a series of house breaks in that eighborhood.

The squad began a systematic combing of the vicinity. From descriptions received, police believe that the same man, working alone, is identified with a series of burglaries in Powder House boulevard, College avenue and Irvington road. Entrance was gained in most cases by jimmying doors.

FASCIST RIOTS LEAD POPE TO CANCEL GYMNASTICS

Rome, Aug. 31 (A.P.).—The government is hastening to remove an unforseen impediment to the steady improvement of the relations between church and state. This problem is a result of antagonism ending in violence between youthful extremists in both camps, Catholic and Fascist. Because of Fascist attacks on Catholic parades at Mantua and Macerata, the Pope has ordered cancelled the International Catholic gymnast congress scheduled for this week. The government immediately issued an official communique and has ordered the inspector general of police to investigate and punish those responsible for the recent outbreaks.

BUDDHISTS PLAN MASS FOR 20,000 DEAD PETS

Tokio, Aug. 31 (A.P.).—Preparations are being made at Tokio's greatest and dog cemetery, wherein repose the bodies of more than 20,000 pets, for the annual animal mass, at which Buddhist prayers are said for their spirits. The burial ground, with its diminutive tombstones and mounds of flowers, was established in 1903. It forms a part of the Saihan Temple grounds. Among the noted dogs buried there is "Mary," the pet of Prince Regent Hirohito.

NO NEW RUM TREATIES ARRANGED BY ANDREWS

London, Aug. 31 (A.P.).—The question of the conversations recently between British government officials and Brig.-Gen. Lincoln C. Under Secretary of State Locker-Lampson said no modifications or extensions of existing treaties had been agreed upon nor were there any other negotiations

STEVENS MADE THREATS ON HALL'S LIFE

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 31.—Rev. Edward W. Hall, slain with his choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor Mills, on the lonely Phillips farmer New Brunswick, September 14, 1922, told a friend, Rev. Paul Hamborsky, before he was murdered that Henry Stevens, his brother-in-law, had threatened his life in affidavit made public today by State investigators revealed.

Clothing found on the bodies of Rv. Hall and Mrs. Mills as they lay side by side after the slayings today were locked in a safe at police headquarters to be examined by experts tomorrow or Thursday to determine whether the murderer or murderers left fingerprints on the fabrics.

Mr. and Mrs. Seyfour Adkins, believed to be residents of Cleveland, today were named as the witnesses who are expected to substantiate the eye-witness story of the four-year-old Hall-Mills murder told by Mrs. Jane Gibson.

Inspector John J. Underwood today received a long distance telephone call from Detective Walter Clecluch, of the Jersey City police department, who is now in Cleveland, stating that he hoped to locate the Akins there and bring them to Somerville.

"A definite motive has been established," Underwood said, "covering all angles of the murder. Of the twenty or thirty witnesses who, we are convinced, saw all that went on that night, we have a sufficient number of stories which carry corroboration with each in all essentials, to give a complete picture of what occurred.

"We need now only to induce others who saw the murder to come forward and corroborate the facts.

"A proper investigation four years ago would have solved this so-called mystery in a fortnight."

PRINCESS WANTS TO WED 'WHITE MAN'S WAY'

(Boston Evening American Staff Photo)

BRIDE AND GROOM BY GYPSY RITES

Princess Rosie Christo and George Manks, Ohio bank clerk, are husband and wife by the law of the gypsies, but they are not in eyes of the law of the land, so they have asked the courts to waive the five-day provision so they can marry over again. She tells fortunes, but she's puzzled at what her own future holds.

GYPSY LOVE ON LAW'S SNAG

Married by gypsy custom, but not married in the eyes of the law, Princess Rosie Christo of the John tribe, today admitted: "I have told many futures for others but my own, it is very mysterious." she is twenty-one and lives at 21 Cook street.

With George Marks, dapper twenty-three-year-old Youngstown, O., bank clerk, gypsy by birth but American in dress, the pretty little princess tried to read her own palm as she waited for Judge Zottoli to decide whether he would grant the couple a waiver of the five-day law.

A week ago Princess Rosie and Marks were married at No. 62 Chambers street, West End, under elaborate tribal rites. And then they learned the law did not recognize the union. Today they were to have left for Miami, Fla., in the "bridegroom's" big car, on their honeymoon trip. But the law said they could not go as man and wife.

They filed intentions at City Hall when we were told they must get a waiver of the five-day law before a license could be granted. Accompanied by George John, chief of the tribe; Rosie John and Florenta John, witnesses, the couple went to the court house. Busy judges could not hold up criminal business to see them for several hours.

Between moments when she plied Court Officer Christopher Mitchell with countless questions, the bride drove in vain to pierce the future. And the eager expectancy of the bridegroom-to-be received a set-back when Officer Mitchell explained the judge was merely concerned with granting them a waiver; that they were not married by that process but must seek a clergyman or justice of the peace.

"What a lot of trouble getting married," said George Marks.

JUDGE SLAIN FROM AMBUSH WIFE SERIOUSLY INJURED

Wetumpka, Ala., Aug. 31 (A.P.)—Judge Lamar Smith, probate judge of Elmore county, was shot to death and his wife seriously hurt when an unidentified person fired two charges of buckshot through a window of the home from ambush.

Judge Smith was lying on a bed reading a newspaper when the shots were fired. His skull was shattered by one of the charges. Mrs. Smith was discovered stretched on the floor by neighbors who heard the shots.

A negro with whom Judge Smith was said to have had a dispute about a week ago is being sought by posses.

ROW MAY BALK OCEAN FLIGHT

New York, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—Captain Rene Fonck, French ace, today faced the possibility that a non-stop transAtlantic flight for which he had been preparing might end in court instead of Paris because of disputes over personnel.

Captain Homer M. Berry, U. S. A., a 16 per cent. stockholder in the backing corporation, has threatened to ask an injunction to prevent the flight unless he is taken along.

Capt. Berry

Captain Fonck has termed Captain Berry an outsider, saying that if a third person were taken he would be a radio operator or mechanic. Lieutenant Allan P. Snoddy, U. S. A., has second place on the ship.

Colonel Harold E. Hartney, vice-president of the Argonauts, Inc., the supporting company, has declared in favor of Captain Berry in the controversy. He has revealed terms of the contract with Captain Fonck, which says that if the French ace, employed at $250 a week, should decide upon a third man, Captain Berry should be chosen.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE fraternity house was deserted when he reached it. He went on up to his room and there waited. Within five minutes a bang and a thump and a whoop of laughter announced the first arrivals. Within ten, the noise had grown to an uproar. Someone started the Victrola. Girls brought in by their escorts for tea chattered shrilly, all at once, each striving to out-chatter the other, as girls will when there are men to hear them. Then there came a stamp of heavy feet on the stairs and Bones shouted, "Jock! Hey, Jock, are you up there? How's to bring the ole banjo and tweak us a little tune?"

"Come here!" said Jock.

Bones entered. "All the mommas have been paging you, as usual, and —why, what's happened? Why the owly look?"

Jock spoke with a quiet force that sobered his roommate instantly. "Look here, Bones, I want you to tell me one thing and tell it straight. Just what's the general attitude on Brad Hathaway's wife and myself?"

"You ought to know. They kid you enough, don't they?"

"Sure, they kid me, and I know they think I like her pretty well and all that, but—why, Bones, good Lord, they don't really believe there's anything wrong in it, do they?"

Bones hesitated. "Nobody in the fraternity does," he said at last slowly. "But some of the fellows outside who don't know you so well —well, I guess maybe some of them think there is." He scowled darkly. "I had to sock one last year," he added.

"Who?"

"Never mind who. He's kept his

Doctor in Cell to Show Absurdity of Arrest

DR. ERNEST AMORY CODMAN of No. 227 Beacon street, who preferred a jail cell in Quincy for an hour to paying a $10 fine for speeding, chose the cell to show the ridiculousness of "petty speedometer justice," he declared today in a letter to the Boston Evening American.

It was a letter in humorous vein and it jibed a bit at the serious administrators of justice who sweat zealously in the curbing of minor auto breaches while letting recklessness and other and more serious things pass by.

"I preferred to go to jail," he said, knowing that it would reduce the affair to an absurdity and I could get out at any time by paying $10. Why not let an overzealous motor officer have time to think it all over, too.

"The officer did not say in court or to me at the time he stopped me that I had done any harm or was endangering the traffic and merely alleged that the speed of 38 miles was too fast.

"Why should I appeal such a ridiculous matter and further tie up our congested courts?

"I am sure there are many people who agree with me that we are inadequately protected from reckless driving and a general automobile roguery and that speedometer convictions are a waste of time and impede the machinery of justice. The world drives without danger on most broad roads at 35 to 40 miles an hour; the reckless may be reckless at 20 miles on corners.

"As for me, I am now a criminal with a jail record and on the next speedometer occasion I can try to jolly the officer or discover his vices.

"Failing that, I, as a physician, can be in a hurry for a serious case. Even if I do not placate the officer, I can, perhaps, hunt up a friend with influence at the headquarters.

"Finally, coming to court, I can plead guilty when I know I am not, or I can appeal hoping in the mass of cases mine will not be called.

"I need never again waste my time standing up for my fancied rights. What a relief it is after a life of spasmodic efforts at respectability to know my place in society."

JUDGE ALLOWS EXCEPTIONS OF CARBARN TRIO

Decision on Governor's Council Hearing Plea Up to Full Bench

A thin ray of hope for the carbarn trio, doomedto die inthe electric chair, came from the lobby of the Supreme Court today.

Justice Braley allowed exceptions which puts up to the full bench the decision whether or not the Governor's Council should act inthe appeal for the convicted men.

Ardent workers for the lives of John J. Devereaux, John J. McLaughlin and Edward J. Heinlein, the men sentenced to death, are confident that the Council would mitigate the death sentence to one of life imprisonment for the three if given an opportunity to vote on the question.

The full bench will decide whether Governor Fuller stepped outside his province when he refused the plea for clemency without calling upon his council.

The bill of exceptions as allowed by Justice Braley reads:

"It was undisputed that on the 29th day of November, 1925, John J. Devereaux was convicted in the superior court of murder in the first degree. Thereafter on the 16th day of June, 1926, sentence of death was pronounced upon him.

"John J. Devereaux is now, and at the time of the filing of the petition was confined in a cell in the State Prison under General Laws, Chapter 279, Section 44, awaiting execution. It was alleged that John J. Devereaux at the time of the filing of the petition for mandamus and at the time of the filing of the petition hereinafter mentioned was insane.

"An August 9, 1926, Francis Juggins, the petitioner and counsel for Devereaux, duly filed with His Excellency Alvan T. Fuller, Governor of the Commonwealth, a petition which is made a part of the pleadings. The Governor refused to grant said request and refused to submit the petition to the Council and so notified Devereaux' counsel.

"The petitioner, upon the foregoing facts, asked the court to rule that as matter of law a writ of mandamus should issue. The court refused so to rule, and the petitioner being aggrieved by said refusal excepts thereto and pray that his exceptions be allowed."

PARIS SCOFFS AT STORIES OF TROUBLES IN SPAIN

Paris, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—The Spanish situation continues to intrigue Paris. Reports of all sorts of trouble, originating in London, are received with skepticism strengthened by denial of an official and semi-official nature.

The Journal, usually well informed with regard to Spanish affairs, scoffs at the rumors. It remarks in this connection that the Prince of the Asturias, heir apparent to the throne of Spain, "who has been represented as at death's door," went from Santander to San Sebastian in perfect health.

SALEM MAN TALKS TO HAWAII

Richard Upham, Bakers Isand Amateur, Has No Trouble Tuning in on Pacific Lands

A daybreak conversation through 5,000 miles of air was revealed today by Richard R. Upham, amateur radio operator of Station U-1QZ on Baker's Island, five miles off Salem, who said he had chatted for twenty-three minutes with Hawaii.

The conversation was begun at 5:30 A. M. Daylight time, August 6 (11:30 P. M. August 5 in Hawaii), and was with E. F. Wood, operator of Station HU-AJL at Lihue Kauai, using a 50-watt set against Upham's 12-watt transmitter.

Upham deferred announcement of the feat until today when he received a postcard confirming the conversation. He has also received a postcard from Mesa, Ariz., stating an operator there listened in.

DRY FORCES READY TO BATTLE

Operate Along 140-Mile Canadian Front on 58 Highways With Land and Lake Patrols

St. Albans, Vt., Aug. 31 (A.P.).—A new phase of the government's war against the rum-runner has opened on the Vermont-New Hampshire Canadian border.

Admitting that liquor smuggling has shown a great increase and predicting that seizures will increase 15 per cent. over last year, Collector of Customs Harry C. Whitehill today announced an aggressive campaign against a steadily growing army of runners believed to have been driven off the ocean by increased coast-guard activity.

The newest bootleg war will be fought out on fifty-eight highways along a 140-mile front by thirty-nine border patrolmen, augmented by 100 customs men and a fleet of four patrol boats on Lake Champlain.

The patrol, now operating twenty-six automobiles, all seized from rum runners, is more than self-supporting from the number of cars confiscated and fines collected. Rhode Island and Massachusetts have contributed most heavily.

SMOKE SCREENS USED.

Increased customs activity has had a response from the rum forces and today practically every possible means is resorted to by the runners to bring in their loads. Smoke screens have made their appearance on several highways and convoys ances range from pack horses to aeroplanes.

Most of the smugglers operate on sound business principles from bases in Canada, where their machines are thoroughly overhauled before each dash across the border. One runner told the border patrol after his capture that he never crossed the line on the same set of tires.

The average rum car is fitted with false bottom, sides, or panels and recently the practice of carrying liquor in spare tires was uncovered. Automobile liquor trains run in groups of two or more on the Canadian trail runs a pilot car 200 yards ahead.

If the leader is stopped the others turn and escape. Many trains also have a rear guard car that is ready across the road and abandoned should an attack develop from that quarter.

RETURN CARGO.

The average rum runner smuggles silk and tobacco on his return trip to Canada, it has been discovered, and this activity has led to closer co-operation between the Canadian and American customs forces.

Boot and shoe leather is one way to hard liquors on most loads, Collector Whitehill said, due mainly to the handy location of the Canadian Liquor Commission stores near the border.

Canadian law stipulates one bottle a day to one person, but scores of "four fine" in every border town are fully prepared to purchase the professional rum runner's load for him in a few hours.

GEN. ELECTRIC PLANS PLANT IN LITTLETON

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor

General Electric Co. has been laying plans for a plant in Littleton, N H. Representatives of the company have visited the Granite State town, looking over a big factory there that has been idle for several months. If General Electric decides definitely to take over the factory, hundreds of men will be given employment and the town by the Gateway of the Notch will be given a permanent boom likely to prove the best in its history.

President Carl R. Gray of the Union Pacific is another "Down Easter" who has crossed the continent to make good in a big way. One of his sons is in the shipbuilding business in Bath, Me., and President Gray is now enjoying his vacation in the Pine Tree State. He recently completed a tour of the Union Pacific System, which required five weeks and one day of travel. Mr. Gray covered over 12,000 miles and was off the system only twice. He omitted not a single mile of branch line. Being president of a railroad system the size of the Union Pacific requires an abundance of physical strength. Few locomotive engineers in the country cover as much ground in five weeks. And inspection means looking over the property as well as attending to a sheaf full of telegrams picked up by the president's car at principal cities en route.

The fad started by so-called "flappers" of going without rubber overshoes has been previously noted in this column, with conjectures as to its effect on rubber companies and their stocks. Now comes the Federal announcement that establishments engaged primarily in the manufacture of rubber boots and shoes reported a total output valued at $115,934,554 in 1925, a decrease of 12 per cent. from $131,739,742 in 1923, last preceding census year. There was also a decrease in Massachusetts, the leading State in the industry. Of the twenty-three establishments reporting for 1925, ten were in Massachusetts, four in Connecticut and three in Rhode Island. In 1925 the ten Massachusetts establishments had a total production valued at $53,626,091. In 1923 there were also ten establishments in Massachusetts with a total production valued of $56,917,929.

Recognition of the fact that New England is coining money as a hostess has come late to many people in these northeastern States. Only a few months ago the writer read an editorial in a Boston newspaper slurring the "Summer boarder" industry, but that this is one of our mainstays is not to be doubted intelligently. Tourists from other sections cannot fail to be impressed by the prevalent courtesy shown. The amount of instinctive hospitality and politeness to be found in the backwoods towns that were once considered uncouth must also surprise many.

In writing the above we had in mind the pleasant attitude of farmers and other workers, but officialdom, as represented by the police, is accommodating as well. I have had a Maine State policeman go out of his way to assist in making a minor adjustment on an automobile. The traffic problem at Old Orchard, Me., which boasts the country's largest dance hall, is pleasantly solved. There is parking space near the dance hall. "How long can we park here?" I asked the traffic officer. "Till the snow flies, if you want to!" he responded smilingly.

Courtesy usually proves a paying investment for individuals. For towns and cities it is an unfailingly good investment. Banks and business houses find it so, as well. A Summer street bank placard says "We hope we will never be too busy to be courteous."

Lately we disagreed in this column with those who foresaw an advance in prices charged by the public utilities. It is interesting, therefore, to note this week lower rates offered by the Groton town electric light department, the Fitchburg Gas & Electric Co., and the Lowell Gas Light Co., the last named affecting Lowell, Dracut, Tewksbury and Chelmsford.

WESTERN UNION HASN'T TIME TO GIVE THE TIME

DEPARTMENT STORE SALES ARE LARGER

Basing its conclusions on reports from 634 department and specialty stores reporting aggregate net sales of $1,126,825,000, the Bureau of Business Research of Harvard University finds that in 1925 department stores and departmentized specialty stores in general increased their sales in 1925 over 1924.

They also reduced operating expenses in relation to sales, and increased net profits slightly. Rates of stock-turn were somewhat faster in 1925 than in 1924.

NET SALES UP.

In 153 department stores having sales volume over $1,000,000 and reporting in both years, net sales increased 5.5 per cent. Total expense decreased .2 per cent, and net profit increased .3 per cent., latter item in 1925 having been 2.3 per cent. of sales. The typical store with sales of $2,600,000 thus showed a profit of $59,800 in 1925.

For 295 department stores with 1925 sales less than $1,000,000, sales volume increased 1.7 per cent and net profit increased .2 per cent., compared with 1924. In 36 specialty stores reporting for both years, sales increased 6.1 per cent., expenses decreased 1.5 per cent, and net profit increased 1.5 per cent.

The Bureau draws some very interesting conclusions from its study. Thus it finds that in the department stores having sales over $1,000,000, cash sales made up 45 per cent, of the total, charge sales 46 per cent., deferred payment 5 per cent and C. O. D. 4 per cent. During the past few years, says the report, the time payment plan of selling has come into increasing use as a means of stimulating business, and last year a third of the larger stores reviewed sold on this plan.

32 P. C. CHARGED.

In the stores having less than $1,000,000 of sales, 64 per cent. of the total was for cash, 32 per cent. charged, 2 per cent. C. O. D. and 2 per cent. on deferred payment. In the specialty stores, 58 per cent. were charged, 35 per cent. for cash 7 per cent. C. O. D. and deferred payment sales were negligible.

As regards the larger department stores, 53 per cent. of sales came in the second half of the year. The peak, of course, was in December with 165.7 per cent. of the monthly average. October was the second busiest month, with 113.8 per cent of the monthly average, and February and July were the dullest periods, with 77.9 per cent. and 77.7 per cent. respectively of monthly average.

In the following table are compared percentages of the major items for three groups in 1925: Group A being stores having sales over $1,000,000, Group B those with sales less than $1,000,000, and Group C specialty stores:

FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

Here is the inside story of the famous Cochran interview on General Motors. This tells why the interview, obtained late on a Saturday night, was not published until noon on Monday. This explains also the delay in publishing the steel corporation interview which caused so much hubbub.

I have obtained the whole story from the man in the best position to know the facts, C. W. Barron, president of the Wall Street Journal and of Dow, Jones and Co., which runs news tickers.

Here is his interesting account of what occurred:

"The lot of the reporter in Wall Street is not unhappy these days, as you suggest. The Wall Street reporter is happy in the performance of his duty—the correct recording of facts and opinions in the field of finance.

"He is disturbed only when there are sinister allegations against his integrity or his singleness of purpose in his service. It is of no concern to him that General Motors is selling at 190 when somebody close to the management sails away and leaves his declaration behind him that, compared with other securities, General Motors is $100 per share undervalued. It is, likewise, no concern of the financial reporter that on the publication of this declaration the stock sold above 225.

"He is, however, disturbed when suspicious people impugn his integrity, and write sensational articles about a reporter walking around with a $70,000,000 interview in his pocket, or an interview that may affect a stock $70,000,000.

"While correcting the erroneous report in your paper that Mr. Cochran had denied some part of his interview concerning General Motors, you make an insinuation that somebody was tipped off concerning the Dow, Jones report that there would be no stock dividend on Steel common declared at either of the next two quarterly meetings.

"Now, I will personally pay $1,000 for any evidence leading to the detection of any leak by any news reporter from Dow, Jones & Co. concerning that steel report.

"You ought to know that brokerage wire houses are continually on the alert for news forecasting stock market movements, that they may wire it to their customers and correspondents. And, sometimes they get track of a news announcement and are able to flash it on the wires ahead of the honest reporter, who must take his time to summarize a situation, write it, condense it and revise it, to make sure of its accuracy, and that there is no violation of confidences, etc. During each period in the Dow-Jones office, the greatest care is taken to insure that there is no "leak."

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

'BIG BROTHER' CLUB REOPENS

Children may view the approach of school time with varying emotions, but to at least 30,000 of the youth of the land there is some consolation in the announcement by Station WEEI that nightly meetings of the Boston Edison Big Brother Club will be resumed, beginning with Wednesday.

The policies of the Big Brother Club remain practically unchanged as it enters its third year of activity. Experiences during the last two years have taught WEEI and Big Brother that they have the right idea. Youngsters are not partial to bedtimestories meowed by condescending professionel enteretainers so-called, of children.

Big Brother himself this year will be busier. The club members voted by letter to eliminate much of the entertainment provided by volunteers. That meant more work for Bob, so he went to the hospital and had his tonsils removed. He believes that the improvement in his speaking voice will be noticeable.

The three Joy Spreaders, trumpet, guitar and piano, comprise a new club feature. They will play selections requested by hospital patients and shut-ins every Thursday evening. The time of the meetings is the same, 6:45 to 7:30 p. m. The schedule is as follows: Monday, a speaker; Tuesday, banjo quartet or glee club; Wednesday, Big Brother's night; Thursday, Joy Spreaders, and, Friday, bands, orchestra, etc.

HOW RADIO HAS TOUCHED THE LIVES OF THE PEOPLE

There are now about 1,000 broadcasting stations in the world. Only five years ago there was no such thing as "air entertainment." In twelve years foreign ship and store stations have increased tenfold; and all together it appears that nearly 10,000 American professional operators are required to keep the commercial sets going. And there are more amateurs than commercial men in radio. It is estimated that no fewer than 100,000 persons are actually building receiving sets at this time and that a quarter-million residents of the United States are connected more or less directly with the radio industry. Statistics of this kind are stimulating to the imagination of the young man who is speculatively considering the future possibilities of this fast growing art and who believes that it may be possible to link its prospects of success with his own.

"HELLO ENGLAND! ARE YOU THERE?"

If you are equipped with a short wave receiver, you have no doubt heard the experimenting which has been going on between the Rocky Point station of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company on Long Island and the new superpower short wave station in Rugby, England. Recently these two stations carried on a radio telephone conversation that lasted ten hours. It may be expected that a regular commercial telephone service across the Atlantic will be the outcome of these very interesting and remarkable tests.

"Night Owls"

The raucous sounds of the loud speakers disturb the neighbors, especially at night. Well-bred people, who would not think of raising their voices to a point where they might disturb others, urge radio speakers, singers and bands to shriek cacophonous bedlam into helpless and offending ears. The neighbor's radio is more of a nuisance than his phonograph, because it is more powerful. Half the radio owners have not learned how to regulate their instruments so as to reduce the volume of sound to the point where it will not carry beyond those for whom it is intended. They overload their tubes, which spoils tone quality and creates superfluous noise. With open windows the offense becomes serious. The abuse threatens the popularity of radio. Instead of being invited in to enjoy radio, neighbors invite themselves out to escape radio. Here are four simple rules which every radio owner in the city should observe: Always snap off the instrument the moment everyone ceases to listen. Sit close to the loud speaker and reduce volume. Do not kill the interest and irritate neighbors by overdoing. Do not use heavy loudspeaker volume after 10 p. m.

Radio Queries

Q. Our radio has been acting queerly lately. First it is loud, then it is soft and it keeps it up. It did it once before but came around all right itself. All the batteries, tubes, etc., are in good condition.

T. M. S., North Attleboro.

A. Your difficulty is probably fading, which cannot be overcome, as it is beyond control. It may be minimized by having the antenna as large as possible, using many tubes, and keeping the set as sensitive and powerful as possible.

Q. Our set has gone dead, absolutely dead. We cannot get any sound from it and would appreciate an early reply.

T. T. H., Lawrence.

A. If your tubes do not light trace the filament circuits and make sure the batteries are charged. Try the rheostat and look for loose or broken connections. Move the tubes in the sockets and make certain that the tubes are not defective. If the tubes light, test the plate circuits. The "B" battery may be disconnected or worn out. The batatery may be connected incorrectly. If the plate circuits are in proper condition the grid circuits may be open or incomplete. Transformer secondaries, and primaries are frequently burned out or defective. If, after trying and still unsuccessful, why not talk to the dealer you purchased the set from. Each dealer or manufacturer knows more about his individual set than anyone else.

RADIO DICTIONARY

DIRECT COUPLING—Direct coupling is the same as the old "single circuit" receivers. Instead of using two coils to couple the circuits together as an antenna circuit and a secondary, only one coil is used and both circuits use the same coil. This is true with the impedance coupling amplifiers, and with the antenna circuit. Direct coupling makes the tuning much easier.

DISTORTION—Distortion is any factor which causes the reproduction in the home to differ from the original in the studio. The commonest sources of distortion in the fan's set are as follows: Inherently poor parts, improper wiring or parts causing howling, or eliminating part of the reception, and improper tuning. The tubes, transformers and loud speakers all add their share of changing the reception and so by the time the fan hears the music it is unusually different from the original.

DRY BATTERIES—Dry batteries are sources of electrical power and are made in various sizes and shape such as the dry cells and block plate batteries which are so common. If knocked over they cause no damage and so are preferred to wet batteries which spill acid if tipped.

DYNAMO—This is the greatest source of all electrical power. The dynamo is a machine which looks like any fan motor, but is larger and is connected to a steam engine, oil engine, or water wheel. When the steam engine, etc., turns, the dynamo generates electricity for radio sets and lighting, etc.

DRIVER—When reading a technical article the fan often sees the word driver. The driver is nothing but a squealer or oscillator. Using a driver allows the user the control of a miniature transmitting station which is very useful in testing and experimenting. The average fan will never need one, however.

EARTH CONNECTION—The earth connection, so necessary to a radio set, is really part of the antenna circuit connected to the ground. When connected to a pipe or wire which goes directly to the main water pipe it is most effective and of low resistance.

PLANS FINE DISPLAY

The latest and finest creations of the radio industry, totalling in value many hundreds of thousands of dollars, will be on display at the Sixth Annual Boston Radio Exposition which opens in Mechanics Building Sept. 27 and continues throughout

The tremendous strides of this young industry in the last year will be exemplified by the beautiful models and the products of the finest radio engineers that will be exhibited in the spacious halls. A number of large manufacturing companies, old-established but new to the radio industry, will vie with old favorites for public favor for their wares.

An elaborate decorative setting will serve as an aid in bringing out the beauty of the new lines.

Demonstration at the show will be accomplished by means of specially constructed booths erected in the balcony of Exhibition Hall. The walls of these booths will be constructed of sound-deadening material to minimize the sound of the demonstrations.

Entries are coming in for the amateur set building contest and this event promises to be one of the greatest yet held in connection with the show. First prize will be $100 in gold and a suitably inscribed silver loving cup. It will be awarded to the set adjudged to set forth the most progressive ideas in construction. Workmanship and appearance also will be given consideration. A special silver loving cup will be awarded to the girl whose set is considered best, judged on the same basis.

The contest is open to any amateur set builder and there is no fee of any kind. Full information and entry blank may be obtained by writing to the Amateur Set Contest Manager, Boston Radio Exposition, 209 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, Mass.

Reduce Static

By "BILL" RADOS

Use a short, indoor antenna for local reception when long distant stations are not wanted.

Reduce the plate voltage of the first radio frequency amplifier tube of a tuned radio frequency set.

A buried antenna is very good for local stations only.

A loop receiver will give better results with less static.

When using a regenerative set do not turn the tickler coupling up too much as when the set is in the critical position it tends to oscillate easily.

Very loose coupling between the antenna and secondary circuits will help minimize the effects of static.

Try receiving without any antenna if located in town where a broadcaster is.

A short outdoor antenna is to be preferred in place of a long outdoor antenna.

If a three-dial radio set is used, leave the first dial off the sharpest setting a little, but adjust the other two dials carefully.

By using a small amount of radio frequency amplification and hooking up with a powerful audio frequency amplifier, the static will not be so apparent.

Connect a crystal across the antenna and ground and vary its contact until the best results are attained.

A Desperate Radio Fan

Apparently the only way that a certain radio fan in Cleveland, O., can think of to get rid of the radiation evil in his neighborhood is to rebuild the offending apparatus. Accordingly he has made the desperate offer to take apart and put together again in an improved way any regenerative receiver within several blocks of his home. This service he offers without cost, and "with great pleasure."

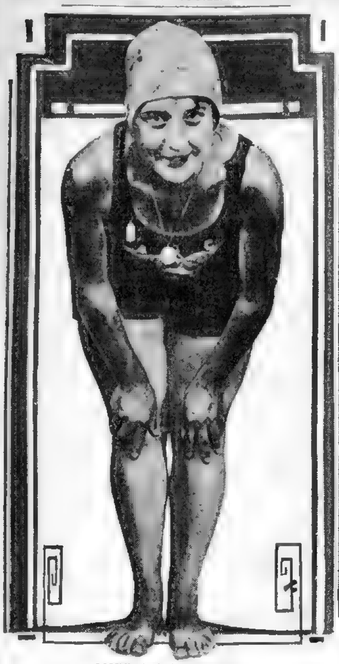
CHAMPS PLAY AT LONGWOOD

TO TRY CHANNEL



MISS MAY ELWELL
Clever Revere swimmer, who will try to swim the English Channel next year. She is to race Miss Eva Morrison from Charlestown Bridge to Graves Light—15 miles—next Sunday.

May Elwell to Try Channel Swim

May Elwell, Revere's seventeen year-old swimming sensation, will try to swim the English Channel next year. Admirers of the demure little mermaid already are arranging to defray her expenses, it was announced today by Miss Elwell, who is to meet Eva Morrison, the Pictou, N. S., girl swimmer, in a race from Charlestown Bridge to Graves Light next Sunday.

Miss Elwell defeated Miss Morrison in a race from Charlestown Bridge to Boston Light on August 1 making the eleven miles in six hours and fourteen minutes, the fastest time the distance ever has been negotiated by a woman swimmer.

Next Sunday's race is the outcome of a challenge by Miss Morrison for the longer distance. It is about fourteen miles from the Charlestown Bridge to Graves Light.

Miss Elwell, who is in constant training, said today that she felt confident of her ability to swim the tortuous course in about eight hours and stated that in the event of success, she would start intensive training for a try at the English Channel next year.

"I am swimming two or three miles every day, just to keep in good condition," said Miss Elwell. "Every morning I take a practice swim from the foot of Revere street to Oak Island and back. I am concentrating on the trudgeon crawl stroke, which I used in the race against Miss Morrison when I beat her in the Boston Light swim."

"I believe I have a splendid chance to make the difficult Channel swim," said Miss Elwell. "My time in making the swim from Charlestown bridge to Boston Light bettered by 36½ minutes that of Rose Pitonoff the former record holder, and I finished one hour and 46 minutes ahead of Miss Morrison, who is one of the best distance swimmers in this part of the country. Indeed, she is regarded as the champion long distance swimmer.

"Of course the English Channel has a lot of hazards not to be found anywhere in this part of the country but I never have felt tired from distance swimming. In my swim to Boston Light I was hampered by a slight cramp but I just kept still and did not tell anyone about it until the race was ended because I feared they would take me from the water and I wanted to finish, cramp or no cramp."

Miss Elwell's announcement that she will try to swim the Channel is the second to be made by New England girls within the past twenty four hours. Delna Carlstrom, the Worcester mermaid, also will make the effort next year. She is the holder of many New England records for women including the mile

$100,000 Purse Offered for Corson-Ederle Race

New York, Aug. 31 (I.N.S.).—A purse of $100,000 for a race between Gertrude Ederle and Mrs. Clemington Corson—either from Los Angeles to Catalina Island or around Manhattan Island was announced by Arch Selwyn, Mrs. Corson's manager.

Walter L. Lissberger, of South Norwalk, Ct., who financed Mrs. Corson's channel swim, has already put up $25 000 for an Ederle-Corson race. According to Mr. Selwyn, Mr. Lissberger is willing to raise the ante to $50,000.

The remaining $50,000, Mr. Selwyn said, would come from Douglas Fairbanks, Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky and a number of other motion picture persons with whom he said he had been in touch.

Mr. Selwyn, on behalf of Mrs. Corson, sent the challenge to Miss Ederle through Dudley Field Malone, the latter's attorney. Mr. Selwyn's letter follows:

"Walter Lissberger, financial backer of Mrs. Corson (Mille Cade) has requested me to notify you that on behalf of Mrs. Corson he challenges Miss Ederle, through you, to a swim around Manhattan Island for a purse of $25,000; or if not Manhattan Island, over any other course that you may select of a distance of not less than twenty-five miles.

"This contest is to take place before the end of September. An alternative would be a contest on the Pacific Coast at any time agreeable to you.

"Mr. Lissberger is of the opinion that other contestants would be anxious to enter this race.

"An advent of this nature would arouse such interest that it is our opinion that Sam H. Harris, Al Woods, Adolph Zukor, and Joseph Schenck could arrange for a number of enthusiasts in the theatrical and amusement fields to contribute to a purse of large proportions for an international race, which amount Mr. Lissberger could augment by arrangement with men prominent in the sporting world here and abroad.

$1,000,000 to Back Champ in Combat With Tunney

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 31 (I.N.S.).—Betting commissioners here have received approximately $1,000,000 in cash and certified checks to be placed on Dempsey to win at any odds between 8 to 5 and 2 to 1. Most of the money is from New York.

Those who fancy Dempsey's chances there found that there wasn't much Tunney money in sight and heard that Quaker City enthusiasts think that Gene has a splendid chance for victory.

"Get it down at 8 to 5, if you can," were the instructions. "If not lay 9 to 5 or 2 to 1."

The idea of the syndicate which is backing Dempsey to the tune of 1,000,000 tinkling dollars, is that odds against Dempsey will lengthen very quickly and that long before the fight time they may have to lay 3 to 1 or even 4 to 1 on Dempsey to get down their money.

Report had it that Al Jolson, the comedian, had bet $25,000 to $15,000 that Dempsey will win.

Big Bill Edwards and Bob Folwell Decry Alleged College Invasion

New York, Aug. 31 (A.P.).—W. H. ("Big Bill") Edwards, president of the American League of Professional Football Clubs, said today that neither Bennie Oosterbaan nor any other football player now in college is wanted in the league.

"Big Bill," advised that Oosterbaan, Michigan junior, had reported receipt of an offer from Bob Folwell, coach, to discuss joining the Philadelphia team, said there was evidently some misunderstanding.

"No one wants Oosterbaan to go ahead to his graduation more than I," he said. "There is certainly a misunderstanding here, for Bob Folwell would be the last man in the world to attempt to coax a player out of college. We don't want any players now in college. We offer opportunity to play professional football only to those who have been graduated."

Bob Folwell Says Offer Was Result of Mistake

Philadelphia, Aug. 31 (A.P.).—Bob Folwell, coach of the Philadelphia Quakers, said today that the sending of a letter to Bennie Oosterbaan University of Michigan end, asking him whether he cared to play professional football was a "pure mistake."

Folwell explained a list of names published last Fall as all American players was given to a girl stenographer with instructions to send letters to all of them.

Players known to be still in college were stricken from the list, Folwell said, and Oosterbaan's name was overlooked.

"We did not make a proposition to any of the players," Folwell said. "All Oosterbaan had to do when he received the letter, was to reply that he still was eligible to play college football.

"The rules of the American Professional Football League, of which the Philadelphia Quakers are a member, provide that we shall not go after players still in college. We are adhering to this rule. We do not wish to have trouble with the colleges."

Oosterbaan Makes Public Overtures From Leaguers

Muskegon, Mich., Aug. 31 (A.P.).—Bennie Oosterbaan, University of Michigan end, who was rated All-American by many experts last Fall, made public today a letter signed "Bob Folwell, chairman of the committee onp layers," asking him if he cared to join the Philadelphia team of the American Professional Football League.

"Kindly advise by return mail or telegram," the letter said, "if you care to play on our team. If so, state when and where we can have a conference."

Oosterbaan said he made the letter public because of his understanding that the rules of the professional league bar invitations to players still in college.

"I haven't the slightest idea of turning pro," he said. "I am just a junior at Michigan and am hoping to make the team there this Fall. Nothing could get me to leave college football."

BOXING BOSS HOLDS UP MALONE-FISHER PURSES

Chicago, Aug. 31 (I.N.S.).—O. W. Hunckе, chairman of the Illinois Boxing Commission, today expressed himself as "disgusted" with the showing made by Jock Malone of St. Paul, and Young Fisher of Syracuse, N. Y., in their ten-round bout here last night. Huncke ordered the fighters' money held up until today's meeting of the commission.

Malone and Fisher fought the main event in Mique Malloy's boxing show at the Southtown Athletic Club. After a dull, uninteresting exhibition, Malone was given the decision. The fight did not set well with the crowd. Malone and Fisher have fought three times, and three times the Syracuse Italian has lost.

SENATORS OPEN SERIES WITH RED SOX

By NICK FLATLEY

BUCKY HARRIS of the Washington Senators, who was a miracle man a year ago, is now just a manager. His team has fallen off the roof, so the nifty second baseman isn't being toasted and roasted up and down the land.

Which means that Bucky will have a new ball club by the time he comes to Boston again, next Spring. Young Mister Harris won two pennants by juggling a combination of age and youth. The combine went bad this season, when Harris thought it would be at its best. So he will change.

Nick Flatley

The Senator pilot isn't a procrastinator. When he sees a hole he tries to fill it. And he has been able to observe several bad gaps in his ball club in this campaign. Some of the Washington veterans have probably been parked too long in one place. A change would do them good. And we imagine the change will be coming.

WINNING pennants means a lot of money in the Capitol, as it does everywhere else. Clarke Griffith, after many lean years, cleaned up enormously with his two titles. He will be willing to spend a lot to get back in the victory class.

He has had the feel of the gold and the glory, and is a good gamber. The Senators will be among the busy traders in the Winter, unless all signs fail. After the dizzy way most ball clubs have travelled this Summer, there should be a lot of shifting before the boys go to it again.

Bob Quinn will never get over wishing he pulled some trades he had offered last Winter. He might have picked up a real ball club had he been willing to let Wingfield or Ruffing go on the block. But the pitchers looked good, and Bob clung to them. And he has been kicking himself ever since.

It's a cinch that the Sox owner will take any offers for anybody this Winter, if the chance of strengthening any part of his team seems likely.

THIS is rather early to talk trades, but from a Boston point of view there isn't much else to discuss. The Sox are anchored in the cellar, and the Braves are rapidly headed in that direction. It has been a sad and sorrowful year, the harder to take because the prospects really seemed good for large improvement on both ball clubs.

The losing habit is a tough thing to shake, once it attaches itself to a ball club. Connie Mack learned that through nine desolate years, and even now his club, which has the class, goes into the doldrums often enough to fall away from a real life on the pinnacle.

The Senators open a five-game series at the Fenway this p. m. and said series should have one effect—it should end the losing streak of the natives which has now stretched to nine ball games. The clubs that have been coming here were all fighting for something. The Washington troupe hasn't any particular place to go this season.

War Antagonisms Are Swept Aside as Verkoetter Enters Calais in Triumph

Calais, France, Aug. 31 (A.P.).—War antagonisms were forgotten today when the German swimmer Ernst Vierkoetter was received by the municipal authorities and given the unreserved plaudits of the whole city for his record-breaking Channel crossing of yesterday.

> "Boston has no strings on any players now matriculating at any colleges. We have no intention of signing any athletes other than graduates," said Colonel Bob McKirdy today.
> "It would be ridiculous for us to break league rules to bring new acquisitions to the circuit."

The climax of the reception came when Mayor Leon Vincent presented Vierkoetter with a medal in honor of the achievement, and the Frenchmen of Calais drank the German's health in champagne.

Vierkoetter leaves tonight for Cologne, where, dispatches indicate a tremendous reception is awaiting him.

Germany Lauds Performance of Swimmer Verkoetter

Berlin, Aug. 31 (I.N.S.).—The channel swimmer Verkoetter is the hero of the day in Germany today.

The achievement of the Cologne baker is regarded as showing Germany's continuing prowess in sports and is doubly welcome due to charges in the German press that Dudley Field Malone and the American press attempted to suppress reference to Gertrude Ederle's German antecedents.

Der Tag publishes a cartoon showing Uncle Sam John Bull and France standing with long faces as German athletes come to the front.

BRAVES BATTLE TO KEEP OUT OF CELLAR

Philadelphia, Aug. 31.—Manager Dave Bancroft, pilot of the Boston Braves, will send Genewich or Cooney to the slab here today in an attempt to even the series with the Phillies. Like in the past the tail-end Phillies seem to have the measure of the Tribe from Bean Town, taking yesterday's open tussle very handily.

This afternoon's game should be a hectic struggle for both clubs, as the Braves, should they suffer another set back here by the Phillies, will take a flop into the cellar. So in order to stay clear of the toboggan Banny's boys will have to win today.

TEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL WINS HORSESHOE PITCH TITLE

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 31 (A.P.).—A ten-year-old girl is Minnesota's women's amateur horse shoe pitching champion today. Irene Pagliarini of Hibbing defeated Mrs. Otto Witt in the first game of a three-game championship match, 50 to 37, and then caused her to forfeit the second when she was down 15 to 3.

Showing unusual skill, the girl made her way to the State title by winning eighteen consecutive matches, triumphing over some of the best players in the State.

SCHOOLS OPEN FALL GRID WORKOUTS

By EDDIE DONDERO.

The 1926 schoolboy football campaign has officially trickled forth from the sport incubator. Salem High's advance guard of gridiron gladiators made their inaugural appearance in heavy paddled togs at Sebago Lake Monday and daily practice sessions are held in the Pine Tree State in addition to other conditioning diversions.

B. Broderick, the most successful coach in scholastic realms, is loaded with optimism.

Salem, claimants of the State title, were in the class of the unmolested last season. Post-season games were arranged with Everett High and Western schools where the youths are big, chunky, husky and brawny.

They all were alike to the Broderick regime and this made the natives football "mad."

It's too early to do any guess work about how the team will shape up when the gong sounds," said Bill today.

In Malden the opening practice was held yesterday at the Pearl street stadium where [illegible] greeted his candidates. The old pigskin was projected back and forth until darkness. Malden, since Batcheldar succeeded McDonald, as head coach, has had a long list of winners.

The players who were on deck ready for action were Nugent and Marston, two stars of a year ago who were deadlocked in the election for captaincy, Cannan, Waring, Pasquale, [illegible] and others.

Medford, with two new coaches in addition to the director of [illegible], [illegible] Roberts will not [illegible] work until next week. [illegible] who left Medford for Tufts College, will be replaced by [illegible] and [illegible].

Vierkoetter Set to Swim Trudy in Match Race

Calais, France, Aug. 31 (A.P.)—Ernst Vierkoetter, the German swimmer who yesterday broke the record for the English Channel crossing, declared today he was ready to accept Gertrude Ederle's challenge for a match race across the channel next year.

Vierkoetter, who has postponed his departure for home until tomorrow, said he had already retained a tug for next season

TILDEN DUE FOR STERN STRUGGLE

National Champ, Paired With Chapin, to Oppose Niles and Washburn

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

The most important match that will be played at Longwood today in the United States lawn tennis doubles championship will be that of Big Bill Tilden and Alfred H. Chapin Jr. of Springfield vs. Nat W. Niles of Longwood and Watson M. Washburn of New York. This match will be played on court No. 2 starting at 3 o'clock.

George Grimm.

The second day of the doubles championship tournament will open with a match between Vincent Richards and R. Norris Williams vs. Alex Graves and Henry H. Guild of Boston at 2 o'clock on court 1.

This match will give the students of tennis an opportunity of seeing the probable Davis Cup defenders in action.

At 4 o'clock Little Bill Johnston and F. G. Chandler of California will take on a tough assignment in the persons of Fritz Mercur and Neil Sullivan of Pennsylvania on court No. 3.

No upsets were registered in the opening round. Many teams were a little bit off their stride, yet all favorites managed to come through without any great difficulty. The nearest thing to an upset occurred when the clay court champions, Thalheimer and White, were extended to five sets in order to take the measure of Waters and Granger, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2.

Thalheimer seemed unable to find himself during the entire afternoon and was weak both on the ground and overhead. White, while not exactly off form was erratic and was not sure of his strokes.

The highly rated team of Ogden and Holman were easy prey for Johnston and Chandler. Johnston was deadly with his overhead and Chandler's service was so hard and well placed that both opponents found great difficulty in returning it. Ogden played the better tennis for the two. Holman was flashy but unreliable.

Tilden and Chapin defeated Scott and McDonald, with ease. Big Bill played his usual game, took every thing that came his way and a lot more.

The women's doubles championships at Longwood will start tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. For these matches the draw will be made this evening, as will those of the mixed doubles, which start also tomorrow.

Frank Keenan of Revere, pressing Chapman throughout the race, finished in second place, less than a quarter lap behind. Charles Jaeger of Newark was fourth, Madonna fifth, Grassin of France last. Chapman covered 42 miles, 4 laps in the hour race.

GEORGIE DAY REGISTERS VICTORY OVER BALLERINO

New Haven, Ct., Aug. 31 (I.N.S.).—Georgie Day of New Haven was awarded the referee's decision over Mike Ballerino of Bayonne, N. J., after ten rounds of fast and furious fighting at the Nutmeg Stadium here. The local boy's aggressiveness proved too much for the former junior lightweight champion, the Elm City scrapper getting the majority of rounds.

Many of the spectators thought Ballerino was entitled to a draw. No knockdowns were scored.

STRANGLER DEFENDS TITLE AGAINST ROMANO

Los Angeles, Aug. 31 (I.N.S.)—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, who claims the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, will defend his title tonight against Mike Romano, Italian grappler, at the Vernon Coliseum. DEMPSEY FLAYS CRITICS OF HIS SPARRING METHODS

Champ Gives Boxers Chance to Slam Kingly Beak

By JACK DEMPSEY

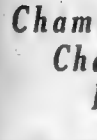
Written exclusively for the Boston Evening American and other Hearst papers.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 31.—Every so often I find myself accused of being rather rough on my sparring partners. I admit that I am, but in defense I want to say that when I engage a man to mix with me, it always is upon this condition:

"You can sock me with all you've got any time that you want. And I want to have the privilege of taking an occasional shot at you.

"I can't be missing you all the time, for if I do, I'd perhaps get into the habit of making wild swings, or short ones.

"You'll have to take a pounding every once in a while. If you are willing to go to work for me on that basis, you are hired. If not, then it's all okay with me."



Jack Dempsey

The punishment that I have dealt out to sparring partners in the past has been rather exaggerated. The boys who report my camp activities realize that the public thinks of me more as a slugger than anything else.

Therefore, whenever I hit a man a few times, they elaborate on the damage done, and I get the credit for still having a punch, but also I get the reputation for "murdering" some of my men.

Any time any of my partners is hurt, he never needs to keep quiet about it. I guess users are funny when I smack over one that is lolling. But when that happens all the fellow needs to do is to fall into a clinch, whisper to me that he's a little dizzy and I wrestle him around so I give him his chance to steady himself.

I don't knowingly sock men who really are hurt when I have them in the clinches nor do I really step out and level a man who looks as if he is really groggy.

This stuff about my "ruining" sparring partners is rather unfair to me. Anyone who recalls what happened to the really good men who have worked with me knows that the experience has developed them.

Jack Renault, who loomed up as a prospective foeman of mine about a year ago, was once a sparring partner. Then there was George Godfrey, who perhaps could whip Wills without much exertion.

Bill Tate, who has sparred with me since 1919 has been so badly "ruined" that he went out and beat Wills twice and won the negro heavyweight championship of the world.

Panama Joe Gans, the Jamaica kid and a lot of others who sparred with me went on the big things in the ring afterward. So did Eddie O'Hara, whose brilliant career was ended by accidental death. Therefore, it can be seen, that any good man who works with me usually is better for it in the end—not "ruined fighter."

Tunney Brands Wills as a Foe to Boxing in New York State

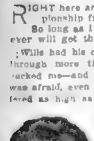
By GENE TUNNEY

Written exclusively for the Boston Evening American and other Hearst Papers.

RIGHT here and now, I want it understood that when I win the championship from Jack Dempsey I am going to draw the color line.

So long as I am champion, no negro—and especially Harry Wills—ever will get the chance to dethrone me.

Wills had his chance to fight me through more than a year. He ducked me—and he dodged me. He was afraid, even though he was offered as high as $200,000 to tackle me. He ignored my challenges, ignored the offers. He said he wanted to fight only Dempsey—that he was the logical opponent and took the attitude that I didn't count at all.



Gene Tunney

I offered to fight Wills anywhere, anytime, and to let that bout determine who was to fight Dempsey. The negro refused. He turned down three different offers to take me on.

When it was found impossible to put on a Dempsey-Wills match, Tex Rickard gave me this shot at Dempsey. Did Wills take that in a sporting spirit? Did he take the fair attitude that inasmuch as no promotor would put him against Dempsey, that he was glad I had the chance to knock a world's champion for a loop? He CERTAINLY DID NOT!

The manager of Wills—backed up by Wills—refused to withdraw the challenge that Wills had fired at Dempsey, so as to make it possible for me to fight Dempsey in New York—my own state.

Finally Mullins and Wills did about everything they could to block that fight in New York. They made the boast that the fight wouldn't be fought in New York. And they made good on that boast.

But who did it kill them?

They were instrumental in driving the fight out of the state, thus depriving the State of about $75,000 to $100,000 in needed taxation money. By refusing to step out of the way, and by insisting upon their burlesque "rights," they finally made a burlesque out of the whole thing and dealt boxing in New York State a serious blow.

They didn't succeed in stopping the fight; they weren't successful in trying to make it impossible for Dempsey to earn money; they didn't block my getting a shot at the title. All they did was to precipitate a nasty mess that now splashes up and covers them—Wills and Mullins.

When I beat Dempsey and take his title I'll give any man who has deserved the right to fight for a title, a chance at me. But that man must be white. For, after this experience with the unsportsmanlike Harry Wills, I have decided that I shall draw the color line—tight!

Fear Cost Luis Firpo Chance to Annex Dempsey's Title

THIS is the forty-fourth chapter of Jack Kearns' thrilling story in which he replies to the charges of Jack Dempsey. It is the first time that the man who put Jack Dempsey on the pugilistic map tells of his experience as prize fighter and manager of the champion. Read this story every day in the Boston Evening American.

By JACK KEARNS

THAT right hander that Firpo landed on Dempsey's chin shook him to the toe nails. There was no kidding about that sock. It had dynamite behind it and had Firpo known or had the men in his corner been more experienced he might have whipped Dempsey.

Had Dempsey gone down with the punch he would have been better off. That he stood up is proof of his ability to take punishment.

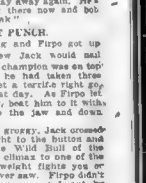
The punch hurt Jack but it was the three that followed that almost ruined a champion. Firpo shook himself together and, forced for the first time because Jack was backing away to get his legs together after that chin kisser.

Firpo let fly with two or three side swiping rights for Dempsey's kidneys. They almost broke Jack's backbone and I'm not kidding. They lifted Dempsey right off the floor.

These, combined with the right to the chin that had stopped Dempsey up for a second or two, made Jack back away to the centre of the ring.

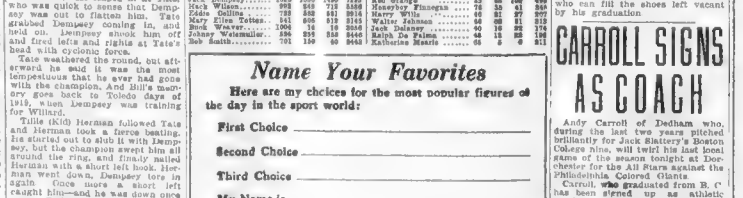
Firpo was pressing in hard now. Jack backed away, bobbing and ducking and there was no one yelling to him. He was in a pickle and only he could get out of it. I admit I held my heart in my mouth.

Another right knocked Jack in the direction of the ropes. Jack backed into them and feeling them on his back he began to bob up and down in front of them.



Jack Kearns

Firpo was poking with his left hand trying to measure Jack for a right. Jack was on the ropes and not able to get away. He decided to duck his way out of it and make Firpo miss. That would be something in his favor even if he was stung. Firpo stuck his useless left out trying to steady Jack's bobbing head.



As Firpo drew back with his right hand, Jack knew what was coming.

The punch simply shoved Jack over the middle rop and where he balanced on his back a second and then lapped over, his head and shoulders landing in the hands of the front row newspapermen, his legs still extended in the ropes I knew that Jack hadn't been hurt.

The first words out of his mouth were "Alley oop" as he reached for the ropes to pull himself back into the ring. They say he should have been counted out. He couldn't move been because the whole operation of going out and back into the ring didn't take more than six seconds. Anyway, he scrambled back and that's that.

KAYO STORY MYTH.

He wasn't near a knockout then in any event but was as I've told when lasied across the jaw and kidneys before he was shoved out of the ring. That last experience did him more good than Firpo. It shook him up to a realization that he had a job on hand.

He got a little more on this shirt tourney and he was himself as he stepped back, smiling, into the ring. He killed Firpo right there. Luis couldn't believe his eyes. He must have been thinking of what he could have done in the same fix. To prove that he was alright, Dempsey floored Firpo twice after getting back into the ring.

The bell rang for the rest. I met Jack half way across the ring. Yelling as loud as possible for effect I said: "Come on champ, old socks. You've got him put out on his feet. He's cooked and ready for wrapping."

I gave him several good whiffs of the salts, doused him with ice water and slapped him to. "Get some room on your feet champ. He's not hurting you with his punches. You're going all over that floor.

"He's ready to quit now. Walk right out there like the last time and take the play away again. He's yours. Go out there now and bob once. He's weak."

FIRPO'S LAST PUNCH.

The bell rang and Firpo got up slowly. I knew Jack would nail him now. The champion was on top of him before he had taken three steps. Firpo let a terrific right go, his last for that day. As Firpo let it go, Dempsey beat him to it with a left hook to the jaw and down went Firpo.

As he got up groggy, Jack crossed him with a right to the button and down went Firpo. Wild Bull of the Pampas as the climax to one of the greatest heavyweight fights you or I or any man ever saw. Firpo didn't move as he was counted out by Johnny Gallagher.

Then came a rumor that Dempsey was going to marry Estelle Taylor. There had been constant talk of it around the movie lots but both Miss Taylor and Dempsey himself denied it. Jack denied it emphatically to me himself and I believed him. He said he wasn't interested in marriage.

(In tomorrow's article Kearns tells how Dempsey wanted to quit boxing game before his marriage to Estelle Taylor gaine-l impetus.)

KISSES GALORE AT DEMPSEY QUARTERS

By FRANK G. MENKE

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 31—It was kissing time at Jack Dempsey's camp of swat this afternoon.

A pair of very charming ladies made a surprise attack upon him and kissed him on the cheek; Bill Tate kissed his chin with a terrific right hand uppercut; two sparring partners kissed the canvas a total of four times and Dempsey kissed the chins and bodies of the other youths with a pair of considerous fists.

All would have been well and nothing untoward would have happened if Bill hadn't landed that curlique for the King's chin. It happened in the second round of the workout. In the first, Dempsey had just gone along so-so with his punching at Charlie Anderson and was letting his partner do most of the wailing.

Jack did likewise for the first 15 or 20 seconds of Tate's advent. Then, following a skirmish in the center of the ring, Tate pulled his right hand off the floor and Dempsey, who never had an idea that Bill was going to do serious work with it, got one of the greatest shocks of his lifetime, as the punch crashed against his jaw.

It spun Dempsey partially around. For a second the champion held that position, and then, when the full significance came to him that he had been hit and hurt, he was like a wild man. He leaped in at Tate, who was quick to sense that Dempsey was out to flatten him. Tate grabbed Dempsey coming in, and held on. Dempsey shook him off and fired lefts and rights at Tate's head with cyclonic force.

Tate weathered the round, but afterward he said it was the most tempestuous that he ever had gone with the champion. And Bill's memory goes back to Toledo days of 1919, when Dempsey was training for Willard.

Tillie (Kid) Herman followed Tate and Herman took a fierce beating. He started out to stub it with Dempsey, but the champion swept him all around the ring, and finally nailed Herman with a short left hook. Herman went down, Dempsey tore in again. Once more a short left caught him—and he was down once more. Rising again, he tried to ride out of range. But Dempsey caught him with a third left hook and Herman for the third time was down.

When the round was over Herman was requested to go another.

"Not me—not today," he exclaimed, as he staggered through the ropes. "I don't want to get murdered."

Frankie Carpentier was the next victim. He tried to get out of Dempsey's range, but couldn't do it. He tried to take what Dempsey shot forth—but a left hook caught him and he, too, took a look at the world from a crumpled position on the floor.

Jimmie Brown was the next—and the finale. Jimmie is a fast sprinting youth. He needed all of his speed this afternoon. Dempsey tore into him and Jimmie tore the other way. Once in a while Dempsey caught up with him. Then Jimmie would try to fight his way out of the corners. He smacked Dempsey about one dozen times, most of them on the run, and Dempsey ... ed in so many in exchange that when the sessions ended Brown was looking around for an private sinbuance.

Just as he was emerging from his dressing room two girls rushed at

Trudy Maintains Lead as Ballot Barrage Draws Near End

GERTRUDE EDERLE, conqueror of the English Channel, continues to set the pace in the Hearst Popularity Contest. This remarkable girl swimmer has secured 22,778 points in the national poll to decide who is America's favorite athlete.

Helen Wills, queen of the tennis courts, is Miss Ederle's chief rival in the battle of ballots. This brilliant young lady has 20,918 points.

If such a contest were held ten years ago, it is unlikely that girl athletes would receive even honorable mention as in those days the fair sex was not prominent in athletics. During the past few years, the ladies have made amazing progress in competitive sports.

Miss Ederle and Miss Wills have been leaders in proving that at swimming and tennis at least the ladies can step into the class meetings without fear of receiving a serious reverse.

Babe Ruth, the golden hearted old boy of baseball, still retains a strong position in the hearts of sport lovers. The Bambino is in third position and has 19,752 points to his credit. Babe's fine come-back on the diamond this year has had much to do with his success in this contest.

Tony Hadjidich is fourth with 18,478 points, while Red Grange is fifth with 13,866 points.

In the New England standing, Helen Wills is leading with Babe Ruth second and Bobby Jones third. Glenna Collett is fourth, Jack Dempsey fifth and Gertrude Ederle sixth.

B.C. TO OPEN WITH FOUR MAN GRID STAFF

By JOHN B. GILLOOLY

Nine candidates for the Boston College football team report at Alumni Field next Tuesday they will be met by the new four-man coaching staff, an innovation in Eagles athletic annals.

Major Frank W. Cavanaugh will begin his 8th consecutive year as head mentor of the Eagles. The Major is rated with the leading coaches of the East as a producer of winning football machines. In 1920 his team was awarded the Collegiate championship of America. In seven combats with Holy Cross the Cavmen have copped the honors five times while the Crusaders managed to win twice.

Coach Cavanaugh will have three capable assistants in the development of his gridsters. They are Diker Doyle, Tony Comerford, and Joe Kosloway, all former luminaries of the Heights.

Doyle will coach the guards and centers, having played both positions a few years back. Comerford, who coached at Dummer Academy last year, will handle the ends, and Kosloway, captain of the 1924 team, will teach the tackles to have their feet to bring down the runner.

"Hiker" Joy will be back at the Heights this fall and resume his duties as official scout. His tips in the past have been invaluable.

It is also expected that Chuck Darling, B. C.'s greatest all-round athlete, will fill his spare time to the development of the backfield and the finding of a triple threat who will fill the shoes left vacant by his graduation.

CARROLL SIGNS AS COACH

Andy Carroll of Dedham who, during the last few years pitched brilliantly for Jack Slattery's Boston College nine, will twirl his last local game of the season tonight at Dorchester for the All Stars against the Philadelphia Colored Giants.

Carroll, who graduated from B. C. has been signed up as athletic coach of Metro League, Havana, Cuba. He will sail for Havana tomorrow, where he has been secured to coach baseball, football and basketball.

The Athletics have strengthened their club by adding Jocko Halligan, former B. C. player to play first base. Jerry McCarthy, former Canadian Leaguer, Irving Tucker of Dedham and Mike Allen of the Cape League.

PANORAMIC VIEW OF SESQUI-CENTENNIAL STADIUM, PHILADELPHIA, WHERE 125,000 WILL SEE CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE

This splendid view of the huge concrete bowl conveys a good idea of the magnitude of the arrangements being made to accommodate the largest crowd that ever saw a fistic bout in the history of the world. By the addition of seats in the field and a stand to be erected at the northern end, Tex Rickard, the promoter, expects to have a seating capacity of approximately 125,000. If Rickard sells all these seats at an average of $10 each, the gate will total $1,250,000. The Dempsey-Carpentier fight in Jersey City in 1921 attracted a gross gate of $1,626,580, while Dempsey and Firpo in their New York Tilt in 1923 lured $1,188,822 worth of customers.

Paddy Mullins Moves to Stop Big Fight

NEW YORK, Aug. 31 (A.P.).—Paddy Mullins, manager of Harry Wills, negro heavyweight challenger, said today he would seek an interview with Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania in an attempt to block the Dempsey-Tunney championship fight at Philadelphia, September 23.

Mullins made this statement after the New York State Athletic Commission had refused his demand that Wills be recognized as the world's heavyweight champion because of Dempsey's failure to fight Wills. "If I could get a fifteen-minute interview with Governor Pinchot," said Mullins, "I could convince him that the Dempsey-Tunney fight should not take place and should be thrown out of Philadelphia."

Mullins refused to reveal what he proposed to tell the Pennsylvania Governor, but said he would attempt to arrange an interview as soon as possible.

Three years ago Mullins and Wills attempted to stage the Dempsey-Firpo match here through court action but failed.

Aronson Quits as Aide to Promoter Tex Rickard

Philadelphia, Aug. 31 (A.P.).—The squabble over the allotment of tickets for the Dempsey-Tunney championship fight September 23 apparently had not reached definite decision today, and it continued to claim the interest of boxing followers.

Because of the controversy, Julius Aronson, local promoter, notified Tex Rickard, who will promote the title bout in the Sesqui-Centennial stadium, that he was through and would have nothing to do with the affair.

Aronson had been named as an associate promoter, but in a letter to Rickard declared that he was not satisfied with the matter of ticket apportionment and therefore had withdrawn.

PINCHOT BACKS WIENER

Aronson's action came shortly after Governor Pinchot had announced publicly yesterday that he was behind Frank L. Wiener, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission, all the way "in his efforts to protect the rights of our people." "Mr. Rickard is not the governor of this State," he said. "I am." Rickard was reported to have told Wiener that if the fight were lost to this city, Wiener might lose his job as commissioner, and this alleged remark brought the governor to the side of Wiener.

Rickard characterized the ticket controversy as a joke and said the whole matter had been adjusted, he said Wiener would get 4,000 choice seats and that he, Rickard, would be left with only three-fifths of the ringside accommodations.

16,000 WANT SEATS

Rickard said there would be 14,718 ringside seats and that he has 16,000 applications already. In the worry over tickets Wiener declared that he was not going to let speculators get the choice seats to which Rickard replied, "Speculators will get no tickets from me. I don't do business that way."

The withdrawal of Aronson brought only a brief statement from Rickard.

"He never had any connection with the fight," Rickard said. "I put his name in there just to please certain people in Philadelphia. He never had anything to do with promoting the fight. I shall ignore him completely."

Both Dempsey and Tunney are expected to be in Philadelphia tomorrow night to attend a boxing show at Shibe Park. According to word received here their respective managers have agreed that they come to Philadelphia at that time.

Tunney will be here en route to his new training camp at Stroudsburg and Dempsey, it is said, will come up from Atlantic City to see his protege, Babe Herman of California, in action.

Mullins Acts on Contract to Prevent Title Bout

Mullins, here with Harry Wills for the latter's exhibition bout at the Arena last Tuesday, told Boston sports writers that there would be no Dempsey-Tunney fight in Philadelphia. He declined to state how he expected to prevent the tilt but said that he would use the contract signed by Dempsey calling for a battle with Wills in Chicago in September as his chief weapon in his plans to scrap the bout.

REDLEGS GAIN IN PENNANT SCRAMBLE

New York, Aug. 31.—(A.N.S.)—The defeating of the Chicago Cubs and the Pittsburgh Pirates and the St. Louis Cardinals were busy keeping even in a double defeat for the Cincinnati Reds gained a half game on their two rivals in the triangular National League race.

The Reds now set a percentage mark of .593, breaking even with Cincinnati at the pace with a percentage of .587. The Reds advanced to second place by one half a game behind the leaders.

In winning again from the Cubs today the Reds put it like the beat of the Pirates and Cards again stood even in the percentage column and one half games behind the leaders.

Gene Tunney's Fined by Judge

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 30 (Universal).—"Gene Tunney" was looked in jail here today, on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. Under grilling of judge he admitted his real name was Carl Vogt of Philadelphia, and that he had given his name as "Gene Tunney" because "the present fight champion" he had put up against a policeman.

Vogt when accosted by the officer started an immediate brawl, and when it was all over Vogt was in a battered condition but the cops were still somewhat the worse of the wear in such condition that the New York most needed a barrel as a legislative cleaning for his limbs.

Yankees Face Athletics in Important Series

New York, Aug. 31 (A.N.S.)—Two more games will be added to the list of games to be played between the New York Yankees and the Philadelphia Athletics, when the two clubs meet in a double header at the Polo Grounds on Wednesday, September 1st. The Yankees are now in second place, one and one half games behind the leaders.

Yogt when accosted by the officer started an immediate brawl, and when it was all over Vogt was in a battered condition but the cops were still somewhat the worse of the wear in such condition that the New York most needed a barrel as a legislative cleaning for his limbs.

The Sport Mirror

—By BIRNEY P. LYNCH—

JACK SHARKEY and his rotund manager, Johnny Buckley, will NOT be rooting for Gene Tunney to ascend the heavyweight boxing throne after the Sesqui-Centennial obsequies. The New England heavyweight champion still holds a contract to box Tunney, which the latter seems to have forgotten.

Barney Dreyfuss, who pays-off for the Pittsburgh Pirates in the capacity of president of the club, picks the Corsairs to cop the National League flag. Barney is nothing if not natural.

Appointment of Eddie Shevlin, former welterweight boxing champion of New England, as an umpire in the New England League may not be a sign of the trend of the times, but it is not without significance.

If this traffic jam continues in the English Channel we may expect to see even Ernest Vierkotter's record surpassed. England is considering the posting of traffic cops in mid-stream to prevent congestion and permit the passage of an occasional steamship.

Tex Rickard's effort to appease the insatiable appetites of the New York boxing fan has stirred the wrath of the Pennsylvania boxing commission. When Tex sought to lift a mere 5,000 pasteboards for his Gotham customers even the Governor of the Keystone State raised a warning finger.

Bill Tilden declares he is in great shape. Big Bill presumably does not refer to his vertical or altitudinous form.

Gene Tunney is grabbing Old Father Time by the whiskers in announcing he will bar Harry Wills in case he wins the heavyweight title. The challengers simply must keep in the limelight.

While the Pirates, Reds and Cards are engaged in their merry frolic to determine which will enter the World Series as the National League contender Lynn is preparing to stage a world series all its own when the Twilight League race comes to an end the fag end of this week.

Andy Carroll's appointment as athletic instructor at Beloit College, Cuba, comes as a surprise. Perhaps Carroll should make a canal

Can Budget Time Just the Same as Money

Budget Talk No. 140
By MARTHA LEE

I KNOW a woman who does all her own housework, takes care of four children, makes the clothing for the family, including some of her husband's, and keeps up with the newest books and the active club work in the neighborhood. Oh, yes, and she has time to teach a class in Sunday school, grow a splendid garden, takes excursions with the family and now she is looking around for something to take up her spare hours.

How in the world does she do it?

It's a mystery to most of us who spend the entire day trotting around the house doing just the necessary things and haven't a minute for anything else. When we have cooked, cleaned, mended and scrubbed, the day is done and we are dead tired.

Well, she budgets her time just as carefully as she budgets her income. Every night she plans what the next day is to hold. The menus the ordering, which rooms are to be dusted and which must be swept, and whether it is to be a baking day, a preserving day, or a mending day. Most important of all, she plans just what portion of special work she shall give each child, beside their regular tasks.

As soon as breakfast is over, she outlines her plans to the family. Then she proceeds without waste of time or effort about her tasks. The children have been trained to go into their little corners and put their share.

They also have learned the value of doing it as quickly and efficiently as possible, for the rewards of work well done are great. Picnics, long hours of play time, vacations at the shore, an auto ride now and then and the great satisfaction of having the household run smoothly as one big friendly unit.

But it does take careful planning, conservation of those hours which are apt to slip quickly by. Just as much planning as in making the monthly income go for food, rent, clothing, heat and recreation. Learn to do one, and you can learn to do the other. The two go hand in hand in hand toward a full, happy and contented life.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mrs. I. A. L. says her problem is savings. Has been married five years and has four children. Was inexperienced in housekeeping when first married and contracted many bills. Husband's salary averages $40 to $41 a week. Board from husband's father is $12 a week.

Expenses are rent for six heated rooms $50, insurance $1.50 weekly, lodge dues $3.50 monthly, gas $1 a week, washing $1.25 weekly, insurance for husband $7.00 every three months. Husband's spending money $3 a week.

Each week buys clothing for self and family and odds and ends for furnishing on installments. Hire a car for $5 a day once weekly for day's outing which doctor has ordered. Takes three and four quarts of milk a day. How will she budget her food money?

Has doctor's and nurse's bill a coming in the Fall and must save towards it. Asks if she can keep her food bills down to $13 and still feed her family well.

What the Standard Budget for $52 Weekly Shows

A standard budget for $52 a week, which is really your income, allows $6.30 for savings and insurance, $10.40 for shelter, $13 for food, $1.80 for operating, $7.80 for clothing and $7.80 for personal. Out of personal comes the presents on the furniture, doctors' and dentists' bills, personal spending money, the money for the pleasure automobile, newspapers, magazines, lodge and church dues—in fact, every expense not an actual living necessity.

You will be very short here. This standard budget is for a family of three and I do not see how you could possibly keep within the $13 food allowance. Uncle Sam says that $18 would be a fair weekly food bill for a family of your size, allowing the necessary amount of milk for the little folks. That means you would have to borrow $5 from your other allotments—probably $2 from savings and $1 each from operating, clothing and personal.

Mrs. T. E. R. has a family of three adults and $36 a week to budget. Pays $28 a month for rent.

The standard budget for $36 will meet your needs, I think. This allows $2.80 for savings, $7.20 for shelter, $8 for food, $5.40 for operating, $5.40 for clothing and $5.40 for personal.

Miss G. E. B. is a recent high school graduate and is anxious for a musical education. She is working toward that end, earning $16.50 a week. Has no board to pay, as she lives at home. Also earns $8 a month playing the church organ. Pays $48 a year insurance. Music lessons are $6 a month. Also has a back bill of $15. Will need new clothes and has a long list of Christmas presents to be given.

A $16.50 budget with no board to pay should easily take care of these expenses. In the first place it will give you $1.70 for savings and insurance, $2.40 for operating, which, in your case, means toilet articles, telephone, all service such as shoe shine, laundry, etc., $2.50 a week for clothing and $10.10 for personal, out of which must come the music lessons, all expenses of music, pleasure, carfares, books, magazines, Christmas gifts, amusements, etc. You can also add to this fund the money you earn Sundays. For the present, I would advise that you pay up the back bill with this money.

Mrs. B. L. E. makes $42 a week. Has no one but herself to think of. Asks how she should budget. Has an apartment for which she pays $50 a month heated.

The standard budget for $42 would give you $4.20 for savings and insurance, $16.40 for rent and business carfares, $10.50 for food, including business lunches, $6.30 for operating, $4.20 for clothing and $6.30 for personal. Since your apartment is heated you can take away about $3 a week from operating to add to your shelter fund. The rest of this budget is, I believe, what you should stick to.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

On "The Modern Stile"

By Marceline d'Alroy

It seems MEN WITH MONEY,
LIKE GIRLS with BEAUTY, can Always find a SHOULDER to REST ON. And, after all, what is LIFE WITHOUT a couple
OF GOOD SHOULDERS in it?

Men, though, LIKE A WOMAN'S SHOULDER to be smooth.
But SOME GIRLS do not OBJECT to a ROUGH COAT,
Although they have BEEN KNOWN to OBJECT to a ROUGH NECK.

WOMEN ARE QUEER, like that.
SOME GIRLS like to bury
THEIR FACE in a broad TWEED SHOULDER, but others is NOT SATISFIED to rule anything less THAN A "TUX."

A MAN'S SHOULDER is, at best,
A QUEER TRYSTING PLACE.
It is like a COUNTRY STILE. The girl
Who FINDS IT empty,
NEVER THINKS of those who have LOITERED THERE before.

By Maria Jeritza.

IF there is one feature of her beauty more than another which a woman cannot afford to neglect, it is her neck.

Your neck tells the story of your age. Moreover, on its proper carriage depend the grace and beauty of your chin, your head, and your shoulders.

If you let your neck droop, circulation of blood is likely to be restricted through your head, including both your face and scalp. Then your muscles will be ill-nourished, your hair may grow thin or turn gray early, and your facial muscles will become flabby and weak, making you look old before your time.

Neck exercises refresh and vitalize you as cool water refreshes a parched plant. This shows how important they are to your well being, enhancing the strength and loveliness of your neck, hair, eyes, facial muscles and chin.

Include the following exercise in the half dozen you practice each morning before your bath. It will tend to slenderize, supple and strengthen the muscles of your back, shoulders, chest and abdomen and will also stimulate circulation through your neck and strengthen your neck muscles, so that you can easily hold your head high.

Lie flat on the floor with your face downward, your feet extended, your arms folded across your back at the waistline.

Now raise your head as far as you can and turn it to the left ten times, then to the right ten times, as far as you can.

Return to first position, head downward. Now lift your head from the floor and holding this position, circle your head in your neck as pivot, first to the left, then to the right ten times.

This exercise will give you a fine stretch and if you practice it faithfully, will greatly improve the symmetry of your neck.

Martha Lee's Reliable Pointers and Recipes

TUESDAY again, and the last day of August too. Summer is surely on the wane, and there's lots to be done yet. Never mind, we have nearly a whole week before the Labor Day holiday comes, and if we get right to work, we can add a crock of pickled watermelon rind, a few pots of mustard pickles and some of that delicious chutney sauce to the preserve closet.

Pickled Watermelon Rind—Boil one pound of watermelon rind in a brine made from 1 quart of water and ¼ cup of salt, for 15 minutes. Drain well and dip into a cold bath until the flavor of salt is gone. Then drain carefully and stand overnight in lime water, made in the proportion of 2 ounces of lime to 1 gallon of water.

Drain the next morning and cook rapidly in a syrup made by boiling together 1 pound of sugar 1 pint of water, 1 pint of vinegar, 1 teaspoonful each of cloves, cinnamon, allspice, and ½ teaspoonful of mace. Cook until the rind becomes clear and transparent. Cool before packing, then place the jars on a wire rack on the bottom of a big kettle, pouring in water to within 2 inches of the tops of the jars. Let the water boil for 15 minutes, then seal the jars air tight.

Mustard Pickles—Take the desired number of small cucumbers, 1 gallon of cold white vinegar, 1 cup of salt, 2 cups of sugar, and 1 cup of ground mustard. Soak in cold water to freshen the cucumbers. Mix the dry ingredients together, and add the vinegar gradually to remove the mustard. Pour the mixture over as many cucumbers as it will cover. Horseradish root, sliced, may be added. Then set away in crocks.

Mustard Pickle No. 2—Use one quart large cucumbers, 1 quart tiny cucumbers, 1 quart tiny white onions, 1 quart tiny green tomatoes, 1 quart large green tomatoes, 2 large heads cauliflower, 8 green peppers, 1 cupful salt, 2 cupfuls sugar, 1 ounce turmeric, 1¼ cupful flower, 1 pound dry mustard, 1 gallon vinegar.

Slice the large cucumbers before measuring. Halve the tiny green onions and cut the large ones in cross, then in quarters. Separate the cauliflower into flowerets and cut the seeded green peppers into small dice. Place all the vegetables except the cucumbers in a large kettle. Pour the vinegar, scalding hot, over them and allow the mixture to set some to a good cook. Mix all the other ingredients together and moisten with a little cold vinegar. Then stir into the hot mixture carefully that it may not lump, add the cucumbers and let come to a boil, stirring constantly. Bottle hot in hot, sterilized glasses.

Chutney, you know, is a hot relish and particularly good with cold roast beef, with steak, or cold sliced lamb. One of the best kinds is made by cutting 2 cupfuls of preserved ginger up into small pieces, paring and slicing 15 apples thin, and slicing about 8 green sweet peppers (having first removed the seeds). Then place 1¼ teaspoonfuls of whole allspice, ¾ teaspoonful black mustard seed in a small cheesecloth bag, together with ¼ teaspoonful of red pepper. Put all the ingredients together and boil gently until it is thick. Bottle while hot in hot, sterilized jars. Be sure and use the syrup with the preserved ginger.

Spiced Currants—Wash and stem about 5 pounds of currants and cook in their own juice for 40 minutes. Then add 5 pounds of sugar, 1 pint of vinegar and 1 tablespoonful ground cloves and 2 tablespoonfuls of cinnamon. Boil gently for 15 minutes longer and pack in hot sterilized jars or small jars covered with paraffin. Gooseberries may be put up in the same way.

Household Hints

Grape fruit, mixed with orange, served on lettuce with a French dressing, is delicious, so are pears with chopped dates, and walnuts, or instead of nuts little balls of Stilton cheese may be used for a change. Again, a mixture of pears, preserved ginger, and lettuce, and a mayonnaise dressing is good. These salads are very useful now that the usual salad greens are scarce and expensive.

Orange salad, made with skinned orange pulp, shredded lettuce and finely chopped parsley

French dressing is excellent served in the orange skins. A delicious salad to serve in the orange shells is made by mixing the skinned pulp of the orange with some white grapes from which the seeds and skin have been removed. Add some chopped and blanched almonds and combine the mixture with some Salad Cream, allowing a tablespoonful for each person. Fill the orange cases with the mixture, cover with thick mayonnaise, and sprinkle with fine

Furnishing the Home

By Marian Moore

I SHOWED you yesterday how to build a room, taking for your starting point a set of upholstered furniture.

Today I want to illustrate the reverse process; selecting the furniture to harmonize with a handsome wall panel or other exceptional wall decoration, for it is logical to subordinate the lesser features to the greater.

Whoever owns a rare piece of tapestry like the one shown here should spare no pains in building it a worthy shrine.

Plain walls and a plain carpet are alone suitable for a proper background, as even the best wall paper designs would appear crude if opposed to the loveliness of the hand woven panel.

Damask or brocade upholstery and drapes combined with a fine grade of mohair will develop the rich tones of the tapestry and its aristocratic elegance. Wrought iron, which is associated with the noble traditions of the Renaissance period, may be introduced felicitously in the form of accessories; electric light fixtures, iron tables, floor lamps, fern baskets or torcheres.

Small panels of petit point tapestry, suitably may be hung in different points of the room, above fireplace, small table or bookcase, to enrich wall sections that might otherwise look poverty-stricken when contrasted with the main decorative unit.

The latter should be balanced by some massive decoration such as a Renaissance cabinet, or a large console table group including an oil painting of unquestionable merit.

Advice to Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-nine and have been going with a young man for six years. We have been engaged about a year and a half. He has enough money to get married but his mother stands in the way, as he is taking care of her. But there are other sisters and brothers to help. Do you think I should ask him about getting married. All my friends keep on asking me when the day will be.

MISS X.

YES, my dear, you would be justified in having a frank, affection ate talk with your fiance regarding your marriage. Very long engagements are not advisable. You might suggest to him that you think it would be wise to marry very soon and live simply and inexpensively, rather than indefinitely postpone

The Taxi Dancer

A Thrilling Story of Night Life and Night Clubs; a Mad Whirl of Adventure

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

SHARP silence was broken by a low, shuddering cry from Kitty Lane.

"Joslyn! Joslyn! Oh, you poor kid! You poor, poor kid . . ."

"She's out of her head!" Lee Rogers declared bravely, although he was, all at once, white about the lips. "She doesn't know what she's saying."

"It is no use," Joslyn told him and Kitty with a tired, labored calmness which was the result of tightening her nerves, as the strings of a violin are tightened, "It's all over. I've told the truth. I want you both to go. I never want to see either of you again. You are both good, too good for me. I'm here for . . . a purpose."

She saw Lee Rogers's face; it was no longer the countenance she had known—it was sunken, drawn with despair. "I can't believe that," she said. "This must be an hallucination."

"You make it all the harder by forcing me to keep repeating myself," Joslyn said to him. "I want you to realize that I'm not worth the interest you're showing. If I explained you wouldn't understand me. Won't you both please go?"

"Your poor kid," Kitty said in a dazed voice. "I'd have bet my life on you." She slipped in defeat away from Joslyn's lingering embrace. "I could tell you a lot about this sort of life if you'd listen . . ."

Joslyn cut her short with an unhappy gesture. "I mean exactly what I say."

Fitzhartley, with a return of suavity, moved across the beautifully carpeted room, intent on the business of countermanding his order to the Jap to call the police.

"Never mind that call, please," he said in a low, polished voice. His manner, when he returned to Lee Rogers was graciously victorious. "If you will leave your telephone number I'll be glad to give you a report daily on Miss Rose's condition as long as she is at sea. You can rest assured she will have every attention.

If Lee Rogers heard him he gave no sign of the fact. His eyes full with baffled pain, were fixed on Joslyn.

"I've been afraid of something like this all along," he said in a hollow voice. "I told you to be careful. It's hard for me to talk to you, Joslyn. The words stick in my throat."

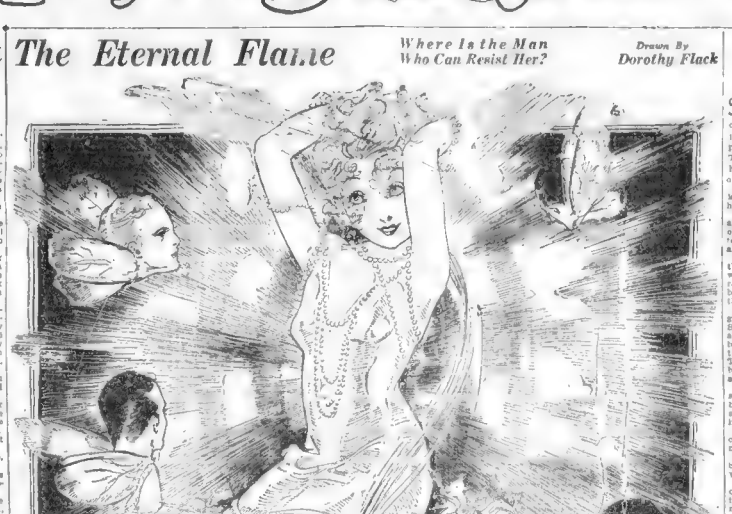
To look at him was such a shameful pain that it amounted to a definite physical hurt in the vicinity of the heart. An inner voice called to her with elation tongue to say something that would relieve him . . . that would tell him the truth. But she relentlessly choked it down.

"Everyone will tell you that you made a big mistake in me, and they'll be right," she said in a curiously unnatural tone. "It's better you should believe them, and put me out of your mind. You have done your best for me ever since we met, but I reckon I just naturally had it in my blood."

A hope, forlorn in its weariness, sprang to his dry, pallid lips.

"I want to know that, finally. Is it already too late—it has happened?"

She didn't move; her eyes were dry and bright as he looked at them, to Joslyn they felt like hot brass balls in her head. "It is too late," she forced herself to lie, deliberately. "You see . . . I'm not even ashamed any more."



The Eternal Flame

Where Is the Man Who Can Resist Her?

Drawn By Dorothy Flack

SHE is beauty, ardent, elusive, irresistible. Bright-eyed, red-lipped, slim-bodied, she kneels among the roses and with arms outflung upwards she challenges the world of men.

Useless for Tony, the blond athlete, to say he will have naught to do with women; useless for Jim, the student, to maintain that he loves his books best; useless for Dick to suppose his office owns his heart, when beauty beckons they become as helpless as the winged moths who, willy nilly, draw toward the flaming light. She does not need to beckon them, her mere presence is enough. Her radiance is a halo of light that moves all who see her. Man looks at her, rubs his eyes, and is never the same again. Gone are the vows and resolutions. Beauty has won again.—DOROTHY FLACK.

One of His Hands Raised Slowly in a Gesture

One of his hands lifted slightly, an arrested gesture of futility. "You know where I live," he said. "I said to you once—if you ever needed someone like a brother—"

Kittie Lane put a hand tenderly on Rogers' arm. "I'm a woman," she told him. "I know she'll let me come and see her sometimes. I'll look out for her, Lee. You got to buck up."

The man's suffering was so keen that silence, somehow, was a kind victory, was moved to the generosity of retiring temporarily to a distant part of the apartment. It was an act that verged on a delicacy of feeling as unexpected as it was dagger sweet.

"If you have to go your way I don't suppose I can do any more to stop you than that clock ticking on the fireplace," Rogers uttered vacantly. "I had—I thought I had prepared myself mentally for something like this ever since I first met you, but now that it's come I'm as much at sea as one human can be. But don't think, Joslyn, that I'm unset because I'm thwarted myself. What hits me worst is what you must face. It's so damnably long . . . life is."

His words had come halting; had revealed to Joslyn by their aching substance a depth of feeling that she had not previously known in Lee Rogers. He was stripped of all that had been sophisticated, self-confident. Even his proposal of marriage had been little more than a surface ripple. This, she comprehended, was the baring of a tortured soul.

Her instinctive impulse, as her nerves throbbed like thin, hot wires, was to end at once and forever his pain—to cut herself off with a clean, quick stroke. It was like striking a numbing blow at a suffer to obliterate at once the perverted kindliness of brutality.

"I have asked you several times to go," she said with final rallying of her spent forces. "Can't you see that you are only keeping me from my work—when I want to be alone with him?"

Momentarily Lee Rogers sagged like a tree in a gale. When he spoke he was wearing, with a scarcely visible motion, on his feet. A single nerve in his cheek was twitching ascendingly.

"I'm sorry," he said, in a tight, artificial voice. "You must forgive me. Sorry . . . to have intruded."

He turned away slowly, like a piece of machinery moving on rusted bearings. From the bright, painted lips of Kitty Lane there was a quick kiss, hard pressed, but bitterly cold. And then a realization that they were gone; a storm of leaping, tearing fear, and, mercifully, oblivion.

mouth shut ever since; you don't need to worry about that."

"What did he say?" persisted Jack.

Bones told him.

"He said that? Some low-down skunk said that?" Swiftly as it had flamed up, Jack's anger sank again. "Oh well, hell," he continued, "he was probably somebody whose opinion isn't worth a hoot anyhow. But it makes me sore just the same. Why would anybody, no matter who he was, think that? That's what I want to know. Just because I go over there a lot—used to? Don't they understand that Brad's one of the best friends I've got in the world?"

Again Bones hesitated. "I don't like to raze a woman, particularly one you like, but honest, Jock, if you could hear Mrs. Hathaway talk I think you'd understand a whole lot better. For instance: remember that house dance we had last year, in May? She was one of the chaperones, remember? Well, I heard her telling a roomful of girls and fellows all about how jealous her husband was of you. Boasting about it! And later on I danced with her and what do you think she said to me? She said, 'I hear you're going to room with my honey next year. Well, now, what I mean, stuff like that from a married woman doesn't go down so good. It gives a wrong impression, and people who don't know you think——"

"Why, she's crazy!" Jock broke in excitedly. "She's crazy as a coot! Why, I've never even kissed the girl, Bones. I've never looked at her, hardly. I don't even like her! And as for Brad being jealous, that's a downright damn lie, and the next time I see her I'm going to——"

"Thing to do," said Bones, "is not to see her. That'd stop the talk quicker than anything else. She can't say much if you never go around there, and the minute she quits yapping about it everybody else will. For crin'm out loud what did you take her to the game for?"

"Brad asked me to."

"You were an one aside of the cheering-section," Bones went on, "and I was a mile away from you, on the other sides. But I'll bet you what's been in your seats three minutes before the word came breezing along, 'Jock's got Eunice Hathaway here. Let's get a rush on and coat she has on!'"

Jock mused. "That's what started this. Somebody in back of us seemed to think it'd given Eunice the coat. At least I'm pretty sure that's what they said. It opened my eyes, I'll tell the world! I'd never thought till then I think that anybody was putting that kind of a construction on the thing." He took up his banjo and picked at one string thoughtfully. "Well, I'm sured," he finished. "I'm through going around there. Brad'll have to come here, from now on, if he and I are going to see each other."

When he went downstairs he was apparently in high spirits. But all the rest of that afternoon his heart was heavy with an odd cold sense of foreboding, inadious, impossible to dispel. "What's the matter with me?" he asked himself savagely. "Why should I feel like [illegible] thing can happen as long as I stay away from there! Not a damn thing!"

But still the premonition clung.

Jock missed the second football game of the season; he spent that afternoon in New York with Yvonne. She had telephoned him the night before, suggesting that he do this. "Really, Jock Hamill, I'm not at all in the mood to travel all the way out there this week. You come here instead."

In any other girl, such a change of plan without any sufficient reason would have aroused him. In Yvonne it was merely diverdingly characteristic. Jock acceded to it with a good grace.

And so they sat together on a huge black velvet divan that faced the fireplace in Yvonne's living room. The window shades were drawn, giving an air of twilight at three o'clock, and here and there about the room lamps diffused a lovely blushing glow. Yvonne leaned against a pile of cushions that Jock thought must have been chosen just to match her. A russet one, like her hair; a green one, like her eyes; and one so precisely the hue of her gray eyes that they seemed like sample pieces of its material. She wore tiny tailor-ed slippers with French toes, and no stockings, and her legs were as delicately creamy and flawless as the skin of her neck and arms.

For an hour they talked generalities. A long dreamy lazy hour, full of a brooding peace Jock felt drugged with it. He felt that he wanted it never to end . . . Fitzhugh and Yvonne. Little quiet-loving flames, and Yvonne's voice, like a lullaby. And Yvonne's beauty to look at, to drink up with the eyes.

. . . Incredible to remember that somewhere men were playing football and other men were watching them and there was a tumult and a roar and a delirium, He smiled contentedly, thinking this. He would not have parted with this hour for any game that was ever played, or ever would be.

Later and soon he [illegible] the conversation around to more personal topics. Always Yvonne [illegible] him.

Then, unexpectedly, she did it herself. There had been a little silence, and she said, "I have been thinking of you, Jock."

Jock answered, "I was thinking of you, too. I've been thinking of you to the exclusion of everyone and everything else, since the very first moment I saw you."

Yvonne turned her head and regarded him gravely. "Yes, that's true, isn't it," she observed after a while, as though she had doubted quite sure it was true. "Well what have you been thinking?"

Mostly in interrogation-points. Wondering who you are, and—and whether or not you're married."

"I'm not married."

She said this expressionlessly, as a person might say "I'm not tired" or "I'm not hungry." But it ran Jock a cart like a pang of impotence. It shook him from his lethargy. He felt of a sudden that he could not sit still—that he must rise and leap about and wave his arms like a madman for the sheer joy of it. "Oh, say that again!" he implored her.

Yvonne smiled at him. "Child! "I know—but say it!"

"I am not married."

They stared at one another for a long intense moment. Then Yvonne laid her fingers lightly across Jock's mouth. "Don't tell me what you're thinking now," she said. "Because I don't want you to tell me."

Jock seized the fingers and kissed them, and the accumulated varue emotions of the past two weeks crystalized all at once, took definite shape, came clamoring to be given aloud that Yvonne might hear them. He knew now. He was sure, now. "I've got to tell you," he said huskily. "I've got to—Yvonne—I love you. I love you so——"

"Tarnished Wings"

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER LXVI

SHE reddened her cheeks and drew a black line under the shadow of her lower lashes. When she had put on the long dress and the huge pink hat, she looked just the way Tony Gardner'd once said he hated to see her look—painted and over-dressed.

Les would tell her she was a knock-out though, when he saw her.

"So what do I care?" Merry asked aloud, as she added one more dab of paint to her lips and another to join of powder in the little hollow in the angle of enemy sash behind her ears.

Out of doors, the darkness was thick and soft. A slight wind was whispering to itself. And as Merry ran down to the front gate, it brushed a low-hanging branch of the old willow tree against her face. With her hand on the top of the gate, she stood still for a minute. Stood perfectly still, remembering another night as warm and balmy and black as this, when she had stood there under the old swaying tree. The night when Tony Gaines had brought her home from the circus, and kissed her—kissed her.

A wave of loneliness and longing so strong that it was like a weight on her body pain swept over her, and she shut her eyes as people do who are in great agony.

"Merry! Is that you?" Les Purcell's voice cut through the darkness. Loud and coarse it was.

But Merry did not answer him when he called back to the house when he spoke to her.

Mama was standing in the gloom of the vine-covered porch watching the whole proceeding. There wasn't much that Mama missed, ever.

"I'm sorry I'm sick!" Merry said to her as she came up the sagging steps. "Tell him I've got a headache! Tell him anything you can think of! Only get rid of him! Get rid of him—" Her voice broke on something that sounded very much like a sob to Mama sharp ears, and she ran past her and into the house.

She took a crumpled bit of newspaper from the blue satin handkerchief box, when she was back in her bedroom, and smoothed out its creases with her fingers.

A line of romantic verse that she had heard somewhere, flashed into her brain as she looked at it. "I have been faithful to thee, in my own fashion."

And she had been faithful, too—to Jay Gatsbee—in her own way that night.

On Friday morning Cassie came downstairs dressed for the street.

Her air of dejection was gone, and she was bright-eyed and alert. A small smile hovered on her thin red mouth and shone in her eyes.

"Where are you going?" Mama asked her in surprise when she opened the dining room door at her first sight.

"I'm going job-hunting, Mama," she said. Cassie misquoted glibly, and took her place at the table.

Merry almost dropped her coffee cup in sheer astonishment. "Job hunting?" she echoed, and Cassie nodded her head in its smart satin hat that cost more than many a good stenographer earns in a week.

"Wheeright and Bukey have advertised for a secretary—and I'm it. They're the same other girl doesn't beat me to it," she said calmly.

Now, Wheeright and Bukey were keen competitors of Morley Kauffman's.

And not only that, but Mrs. Eaton Wheeright and Mrs. Everard Bukey were two of Cassie's boson friends.

Merry saw at once why Cassie was going to get a job at Wheeright's establishment, simply to irritate Morley. To advertise to his friends that his wife had left him and that she was not supporting her any more. To point out to humiliated anybody, she certainly put her heart and soul into her work.

"Oh, Cassie, I wouldn't do the Merry told her anxiously. "Think how awful it's going to be about your doing such a thing!"

Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

"QUITE so," said Mrs. Thurlow, rising with stately dignity and flinging a generous silver forearm about the neck of her painted ch-fonier with a gesture indicating that she suddenly disliked, "You want to choose your friends and evidently I am not one of them! Good day!"

She whirled across the lobby with energy amazingly unlike the usual serene gliding of her gait. And I sat there feeling abashed, ashamed, ashamed.

"Why couldn't I have been gracious?" I asked myself. And then I found myself protesting angrily: "Jim, you had no right to bear the blame for Pat's wrongdoing. You saved Jackie then and sacrificed yourself when you were innocent. And now—now when the world is still condemning you for your heroism when I'm still suffering from it—what new horror must I face for you?"

I shuddered my heart went deeper into its slough of despond, for I realized that Jim was seeking for freedom from me—and the new disgrace that was impending would not be faced with him.

In the few moments that elapsed between the departure of Lorraine Thurlow and the arrival of Mme. Petrusi, I became conscious of what a very elegant and aloof meeting Madame Petrusi had given Jim. As I sat there waiting for her to come and "break my heart," as she had sadly threatened to do, I began to feel more and more apart from the world about me.

The Woman's Club is built like an old colonial mansion, and rich in "Americana," and old pieces of furniture which breathe of stately days of colonial traditions. Even the rugs, the fine old low-boys, the colonial mirrors and candlesticks, chairs were in solid maple or walnut or warm brown mahogany superbly set off against the white paint. The very air spoke of Dolly Madison and Martha Washington, and all the Dames and Daughters descendants were striding about the house smoking cigarettes and showing slim long legs, which I as a child would be below the knees.

I tried to picture the ladies of that other day coming back to the setting that bespoke their taste and their traditions—and finding us here, us of today, short skirted, short haired and short, too, of the stately dignity that was a part of the training of the gentlewoman of tha other day.

They would shudder away from us all." I thought, "even as the women who smile at me now with casual acceptance for one of their own clan will shudder away from me soon."

I began to realize how horrible it would be to become the pariahs we had escaped being when we put away from the city which at its judgment and hid in the country where little or nothing was known of Jim "De Courcey Case."

Fashions and Fancies

"Getting Their Back Up"—is always a rather mulish thing to do, so we are not surprised to find the newest bedroom mules with definitely heightened backs. This surely makes them much easier to wear. The fronts of these satin brocaded slippers has the toe and forepart sparely covered in feather trimming.

Making Wild Waves Wilder—the smartly clad bathing girl, who wears a dark, mannish suit adds a wild dash by winding around her hips a brightly striped gyay girdle of waterproof silk. Tied in front in a huge bow such a belt is most striking. The gypsy effect is heightened by a bandana bathing cap, draped turban fashion, to match.

Beads and Boutonnieres Matched—If one sedulously follows the Parisian fads. With a pink gardenia rose or bunch of sweet peas deep pink pearls are worn. With a pansies, orchids or hellotrope the pearl necklace is mauve, and pearls of a blue tone accompany such flowers as forget-me-nots or cornflowers.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When a bride is having a home wedding with only one bridesmaid, is it proper for the ceremony to be performed as follows? The bridegroom and the best man are to wait with the minister in the parlor. The bridesmaid to walk alone, and the bride and her father following.

Or is it proper for the bride to walk to the altar with the bridegroom? There has been much discussion on the subject and so I thought I would ask you.

A BRIDE-TO-BE

THE first procedure that you outline is the correct one. The clergyman enters first, takes his place in front of the place where the ceremony is to be performed, and faces the assembled company. Then the bridegroom enters with the best man, takes his place on the right of the temporary altar with his best man a bit further to his right. Then the attendant of the bride enters alone and takes her place at the left of the temporary altar. Then the bride enters with her father. The groom comes from the father steps to one side and stands on the left of the bride's mother. In the meantime the bridegroom steps forward and stands on the right of the bride. After the ceremony the couple turn in their places and receive the congratulations and best wishes of their friends.

It is never in good form, either in a church or house wedding, for the bride and bridegroom to walk to the altar together.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it ever proper for a man to say, "Excuse my glove," for not removing it to shake hands?

J.

NO. He should remove his glove not excuse himself for being so [illegible] not to remove it.

alone will satisfy you in quick cooking oats —"Quaker" flavor

IN QUICK QUAKER—the world fastest hot breakfast—the famous toasty flavor of the real Quaker Oat has been retained.

That, to you, is important; for flavor is the big point, after all, in food.

No other brand has that flavor. It took Quaker Oats experts years to attain it, and, at the same time, give you 3 to 5 minute cooking.

Quicker milling, too, retains much of the "bulk" of oats. And that makes laxatives less often needed. Protein, carbohydrates, and vitamins and the "bulk" are thus combined in making Quaker Oats an excellently balanced food.

That is why, in quick cooking oats, as in the regular, the important point to millions is to see the picture of a Quaker on the package of Oats that they buy.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE---BY HELEN ROWLAND

By Helen Rowland

DO you know a perfectly happy woman?

I don't!

Haven't we got the 'Oh-dears" and the "I-wishes—" and "If-I-only-hads," and the "Oh-Lord-gimme-something-differents"?

For instance, only yesterday Dorothy, the Busy Woman, said to me, "Oh dear, I wish I had nothing to do except wind the cat and feed the clock and put out the canary!

"Of course, it's wonderful to have a profession and a place in the sun, and to 'be somebody'—and all that!

"But, between the daily grind and the social stuff and my city apartment and my country place, I am worn to a rag, and beginning to look like the end of a misspent day! And, I just long to sit at home and darn socks and eat chocolates and read French novels—and stagnate!"

* * *

And only last week, Caroline, the Perfect Wife, moaned in my ear, "Oh dear! I wish I had something to DO!

* * *

"Of course, my husband is the best and sweetest and most wonderful man in the world! And I have a lovely home and adore housekeeping and am perfectly happy—and all that!

"But, while my heart is satisfied, my brain is simply stagnating! If only I had a job or a profession, and could make money, and do something worth while, and BE something in life!

* * *

"Oh dear! I wish I had something to DO!"

And Evelyn, the bloated plutocrat, sighed wearily, "Oh dear! I wish I knew some interesting people—like Michael Arlen or Irving Berlin!

* * *

"I am bored to death by myriads of 'friends' who have motor cars and yachts, and wine cellars. But they are all flatheads and lightweights—and so commonplace!

* * *

"My life is one long, hideous round of dinner parties and jazz and week-end messes. Oh, dear, I wish I knew some writers, or actors, or artists, or geniuses—or something!"

* * *

And Gloria, the Celebrity, wailed pathetically, "Oh dear! I wish I knew some Human Beings! I am sick of egoists and near-wits, and people who expect you to read their books, and go to their studio teas and scintillate!

"Sometimes I yearn desperately to go back to Hickstown where I was born and where the only thing anybody ever thought about was when to put up jam, and when to take down the screens, and what to feed the baby! I'd give twelve high-brows in low collars for one lowbrow in a high collar!"

* * *

Oh yes, woman wants but little here below—but that little is always something she hasn't GOT! And, I fancy that's true of men, too! Nobody is ever satisfied, in this world!

KEEP CHILDREN BUSY

By LUCY LOWELL

THE happiest vacation for children, and that from which they derive the most benefits, is not the one eliminated of all tasks and responsibilities.

A noted authority on child-rearing urges fathers and mothers who take their children on camping trips to give each youngster some small duty to be performed every day, something he will know is a definite help in running the camp.

Even in the cottage or hotel this may be accomplished. The task should not be worryin or difficult but however small it is, the boy or girl may feel that by handling it he or she is contributing to the comfort of the family, and thus may easily acquire a sense of responsibility.

An interesting story is told of Roosevelt's little grandson, Richard, who was paid by his mother and a Summer neighbor a cent for every four flies he killed. In this way he earned his Christmas spending money.

A few of the duties suggested for the little ones are helping with the dishes, preparing vegetables for cooking, sweeping porches, catching fish for supper, going for the mail. And frequently small boys have learned to darn their socks, after wearing holes in them on vacation hikes!

Vacation should not be allowed to become a time when all physical habits built up for children are allowed to slide away.

The most useful holiday is a time not of idleness but of changed activity.

FOR Acid Stomach

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this sour-ing waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any druggists. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor, Charles H. Phillips.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

WHILE the reformers are hard at work trying to think up some new restrictions, it's too bad that a few real Americans don't get together and pass a law against reformers.

ONE citizen suggested that we go around and chloroform them. This is a good idea but we couldn't tell when they were unconscious.

IT wouldn't be fair to send them to jail because even prisoners have a few rights.

BUT something should be done to stop them. They're making laws faster than we can break them.

IT'S getting so that no matter what we do, there's an ordinance against it.

IT won't be long before this country will be known as The United Mistakes of America.

THE reformers are doing their best to make this world a BITTER place to live in.

MOST of them claim that they are self-made men. It's very decent of them not blame the job on somebody else.

VERY few of them have occupations of their own. Their work is to mind other peoples' business.

A REFORMER is a man who shakes your hand and kicks you in the shins at the same time.

PROUT HITS FOE IN PROTECTION OF EDITOR

Attacking his opponent, District Attorney O'Brien, in the shadow of the latter's office in Pemberton square, William C. Prout, candidate for district attorney in the Democratic primaries, today renewed charges that O'Brien is withholding prosecution of a Boston editor for political easons.

Prout declared this editor (not connected with the Boston Evening American) offered to support him (Prout) for $300,000 but he flatly refused such support at any price. He said his first move if elected would be to investigate theeditor's published statements in the mayoralty election last Fall.

"A plan to defeat the will of the voters by the bungling of a large number of candidates is becoming apparent," said Prout.

Attacks on O'Brien were also made by Thomas L. Lavelle another candidate for the office, speaking at a rally at the Cunard Docks, East Boston. Lavelle charged the District Attorney refused to debate with him.

"He says he will engage in no street corner brawl and that he does not propose to bring his office into the gutter," said Lavelle. "I accept his refusal to debate, but I want to say that my respect for the officeof District Attorney, for which I am qualified by long experience, would not permit me to allow any brawl should O'Brien meet me in debate."

Vincent Brogna, former Assistant District Attorney, a candidate for the State Senate from the Second Suffolk District, will open his active campaign at 8 o'clock tonight at Breed's square, Orient Heights.

FATHER DENIES A REPORT

Denial that his daughter, 13-year-old Clara Spell of Cambridge, was missing from home two weeks, was arrested in an automobile with a sailor after walking around with him all night, and spent a week in jail, was made today by the father of the girl, a business man of the Central square district of Cambridge.

He also declared that reports quoting her as saying she had breakfast in bed and a generally enjoyable time at Charles Street Jail were untrue, for as far as he knew she made no such statements of her experience there.

The facts, according to the girl's father, are that she left the home of an aun tin Springfiel don Tuesday and was picked up by a policeman on Thursday, shortly after a sailro approached her and began a conversation. She was arrested as a vagrant.

Two days were spent in jail, but when the father found her she was released, and later in court, the charge was formally dismissed. When arrested she gave the name of Jacqueline LaVala of Columbia, S. C., and her age as nineteen.

SOVIET WANTS TO PAY U. S.

Moscow, Aug. 31 (I.N.S.).—Soviet Russia is ready to send a mission to Washington to negotiate the funding of the Kerensky debt to the United States, it was stated officially today.

Soviet Russia is ready to make a formal offer if assured the offer would not be rejected.

"We are willing to discuss the debt without mentioning recognition," said a Foreign Office spokesman. "If we sent a commission it would be ready to discuss all American claims, both governmental and private."

The announcement is a decided change in policy, as Soviet Russia has heretofore refused to recognize the Kerensky debts, although it had intimated it might recognize the debts if the United States would extend recognition.

The total Russian war debt to the United States is $192,601,297.

SALAD CONCERN BOOMS SALES

Notwithstanding reports of dullness in business conditions in many parts of the country New England has recently shown many evidences of a marked revival. Haverhill has a brilliant example of industrial activity in the concern of J. F. Howard, Inc., manufacturers of salad dressings.

Annual sales have increased 300 per cent. since a group of men successful in other lines of business took control of the company two years ago, a new "model" plant has been built with a capacity of 48,000 bottles daily and Howard's mayonnaise is being sold all over the United States and in many foreign lands.

These men realized the excellent quality of a product which for years had enjoyed high public favor, and they set out, not only to perpetuate this high quality, but to enhance it, if possible. One result is the equipment of the new plant where they safeguard the flavor of the mayonnaise by letting it come in contact only with wood, pure nickel or silver surfaces. For the sake of cleanliness, no coal is used, all power being electric.

One of this group is Henry L. Taylor, president of the company, a man long prominent in the business affairs of the Haverhill district, head of the Henry L. Taylor Company of Haverhill and director of the Merrimac National Bank. Another is Myron L. Whitcomb, president of the Merrimac National Bank, and a third is Edwin R. Starr, general manager of the North Packing and Provision Company of Boston.

Arthur D. Dickson is treasurer and general manager of the company and W. S. Dickson is vice-president in charge of sales, with headquarters at No. 131 State street, Boston. Arthur D. Dickson was formerly general manager for Cloverdale Stores and during his regime there the annual volume of business increased from $2,000,000 to $6,500,000.

Moses Vindicated

The Rush Starts for the TRUE-AMERICAN Band-Wagon

(Copyright, Clinedinst.)
UNITED STATES SENATOR GEORGE H. MOSES OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

To United States Senator George Higgins Moses, of New Hampshire, who has been at all times a Senator OF THE UNITED STATES and never a milk-and-water "internationalist," the late news from Idaho, from Florida and from Indiana must be as cheering as the reports that come to Concord with reference to his campaign for renomination.

In Idaho, the Honorable Frank R. Gooding of Gooding, who voted last January in the Senate at Washington in favor of American adherence to the League of Nations World Court, stands up before the Republican State Convention, expresses his sincere regret for that act and promises at the first opportunity to vote to pull us out again.

Senator Park Trammell, of Florida, is one of the DEMOCRATS who voted to shove us into the Court. In the beginning, the League and the League's World court were DEMOCRATIC "notions."

Senator Trammell is sorry, too. HE will present the resolution Senator Gooding wants a chance to vote for, withdrawing the Senate's ratification of the resolution authorizing American adherence.

At Fort Wayne, Indiana, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, speaking on "The League Court," objected to the World Court "because it is NOT a world court and because it IS a part of the League of Nations." Said Colonel Roosevelt:

"One of the cardinal principles on which we opposed entering into the League of Nations was that we felt that the United States deserved to be treated on a par with other nations. This principle is violated in the Court in just the way it is violated in the League.

"The statute provides that the Judges shall be elected by the Council and Assembly of the League. In so doing it provides that England shall have 7 votes to our 1 in determining who the Judges may be. What chance would we have for an impartial decision on a matter where our interests and England's varied?

"Not only has Britain the right to 7 votes to our 1, but in addition she has the right to MORE judges. Great Britain could elect judges to the Court from England, Canada, Australia and Egypt simultaneously, while the United States could elect but one."

Statesmen of BOTH the old parties, it seems, are beginning to see through the World Court game and the League of Nations sham as George H. Moses has seen through them FROM THE BEGINNING.

What Gooding is saying now, in Idaho, what Park Trammell is telling the neighbors down in Lakeland, and what the younger Roosevelt told a cheering Hoosier audience last Saturday night, MOSES OF NEW HAMPSHIRE has been telling Senators and Americans in general eight years or more.

That such a stalwart American should be compelled to CANVASS his State for renomination is new proof of how little the statesman is appreciated during his lifetime.

George H. Moses, AMERICAN, should not be standing before New Hampshire Republicans today with his hat in his hand; rather New Hampshire should be on its knees before a truly GREAT Senator, asking HIM to continue in the service of the Nation, to the greater glory of New Hampshire.

Less Noise

Good News

Schopenhauer made too much of a fuss about noise, especially the cracking of coachmen's whips. Nevertheless, noise is a proof of barbarism. Civilization makes too little effort to get rid of it.

The Government Bureau of Standards hopes to make building steel skyscrapers noiseless by using electric welding instead of riveting.

Welding is noiseless, and the bureau's crushing machine of 5,000-ton force was unable to break apart two plates of a big steel girder joined by electricity. Finally the steel girder buckled, but the welded joint held fast.

Savages in the forests, appalled by the silence, make all the noise they can with tom-toms and yelling. Civilized men, living in the city forest of steel, hear more noise than they want.

BIOGRAPHY GIVES KEY TO HISTORY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE important part of history is biography.

Men epitomize periods. If you fully comprehend the man's life you will understand the forces that shaped his character and the influence of his personality upon the time.

In these you have the key to the deepest comprehension of the important elements of his period.

If you understand the life of Abraham Lincoln you know the history of America's frontier days and of her Civil War.

If you know Robert Clive and his career in the Orient you grasp the kernel knowledge of England's conquest of India.

If you appreciate all of the life of the Little Corsican, Napoleon, you pierce the soul of the history of the times that enveloped him.

Such men condense the currents of change and the spirit and ideals of the mass of people in their epochs.

They focus the essential historical elements into a small space.

Dates and dry-as-dust facts are of slender importance for the future. Motives, ideas and reactions are of primary significance.

One focuses the attention upon the dead phase of history, the other upon the living phase which helps illuminate the road of history that is in the making.

Not only is biography an aid to a correct understanding of an age, but it is the most fascinating avenue of approach.

First and last we are interested in men.

Personalities rather than ideas hold our attention.

Biography is history in its most assimilable form.

Following the path of personalities we arrive most easily at the correct sensing of the moving forces of a time.

In view of this it is interesting to note that courses in biography are being offered by the history departments of three colleges.

The institutions which have taken up the experiment lie in widely separated sections of the country.

Whittier College in California, Duke University in North Carolina, and Wittenberg College in Ohio, offer biography courses.

History is "the study of studies" and biography is the most interesting method of attack.

It is to be hoped that other colleges and schools will take up the plan of instituting such courses.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN WHO WORK FOR MODERN CONCERNS

In middle age or beyond it may become necessary for you to make a radical change in your mode of living or in your work.

Don't give up the effort to accustom yourself to these necessary changes.

One of the reasons why older men are not more often hired is because employers believe them to be so set in their ways that it would be difficult to change these men and make them adapt themselves to new conditions and requirements.

Knowing this, you should make it your aim to modernize yourself. You had better keep abreast of the changes as they come.

If you older men would give enough attention to it, it would be possible for you to meet the demands of your job as the younger men do, provided, of course, that it is not something beyond your physical and mental powers.

But in ordinary circumstances you can keep up if you will put yourself through the necessary training.

It is hard to change the habits of a lifetime; it may cause you uneasiness to do it but if you stick to it you will succeed.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Have divels?
Devils of temper and devils of sentimentality. Devils of spite and devils of cowardice and devils of envy, devils of morose and grief—some. Devils of remorse and devils of worst of all. I think these are the worst of all.

Now these devils are not a lot of trouble. They are not a lot of trouble to my friends. I may daily succeed in keeping a serene front and may even manage to keep a serene rumpus. But they certainly do raise cain all over my interior scenery. I am at all times, sometimes I'm at a loss for a way to fight them.

Particularly lately.

I've had heavy treads lately. It has rather wiped out my defenses. Pa's trouble with Ma. You know how it is. And most of my pet philosophy (which was probably streaked with a lot of ignorance and conceit) has killed me.

So these devils have been having the best of it quite often. They've been putting their ugliness over on me about as they pleased. Until last I grew heartily sick of it. And then a bright idea occurred to me. I couldn't fight their ugliness any more with philosophy. Or with grit either. But I could fight it with BEAUTY.

I could put up BEAUTY as a shield against the wallops of their UGLINESS.

If spite, or fear, or remorse, or grief rose in me, and threatened to spoil life for me, my faith wasn't strong enough to drive them away, nor was my philosophy deep enough or my courage great enough. But I COULD instantly invoke a vision of loveliness which would crowd out the spectre I hated.

Revenge, for Instance.

For instance, there's this hellness of revenge. I've got a hot taste for revenge concealed within my simple, girlish contours. I like to get even. Also there are a considerable number of folks in the world with a yen to get even on me. So when I feel the Revenge Urge prickling around my vicinity I immediately say—

"Listen, Billy, that person you want to do dirt to or who wants to do you dirt isn't the double-dyed villain you think. He's just a lonely, hurt human who is hitting out like a bewildered child at a shadow in the dark. And you're not the arch-criminal you like to pretend either, Black, old girl. You act tough, but you're soft as the meat one inside. You're lost and bewildered yourself and you'd be mighty grateful for any friendliness. Then why not stop cutting up and give yourself and the other chaps a chance? G'wan, be yourself, sister!"

Now that may seem silly to you but it actually does dispose of the devil in me. And it is impossible for that devil to return as long as my heart is filled with the picture you're going to do. And here you're wasting time thinking of that flop you made. Snap out of it, kid. There's a rose garden ahead, why go moping in the gutter?

I think of roses. And I THINK of roses. And take it from me, IT ISN'T POSSIBLE TO FEEL GUTTERS IF YOU'RE THINKING ROSES.

And then there's that bitterest, cruelest devil of all—the devil of death.

"I'm real," he cries, and then I go in the mud whimpering like a licked cur. But the next minute I'm up again.

"You're NOT real!" I shout. "You're the worst bunk of all. If the silly dust I'm made of cannot be lost (and science tells me it cannot) then the tenderness and the courage and the joy that is really in me CANNOT DIE. And those I loved are SAFE. They're going on and you're a silly nightmare. GET OUT!"

And whether you want to believe it or not, the worst devil of all does get out, when I say that!

FISH STORY FILLED WITH THE TRUTH

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

THIS is a fish story, but one filled with truth. The fishermen around the coasts of France, but especially those of Bretagne and the Mediterranean shores, have long complained of the ravages of a sometimes mysterious inhabitant of the sea, which they call the 'beluga.' It is mysterious, however, only as to its precise identity among the marine relatives of the whale known as the small cetaceans, something that the evildoer is a grampus, some that it is dolphin, and others that it is a porpoise.

But those who take a wide and unprejudiced view, are affected by locality, believe that it is all three. In other words, all of the small cetaceans are suspect.

At any rate, ichthyological authorities assert that the offender is certainly not what it is called, viz., a beluga, for the beluga dwells only in the cold waters of the north-ern seas, and is a larger animal than the kind that eats the catch and breaks the nets of the French fishermen, even imperilling, according to some accounts, the continuance of their industry.

The matter is so serious that the fishermen have again and again demanded aid and protection from the French Marine Department, and to a certain extent they have obtained what they asked for, without, however, finding any relief from the destructive attacks of their mysterious enemy.

Many Weapons

All sorts of weapons have been called into play, but without much effect. To begin with, the government agents found themselves hampered by not knowing for sure what enemy they had to fight.

When they killed a grampus and it was found to have been feeding upon devil fish, the conclusion was natural that they were fighting a friend rather than an enemy, for, as all readers of Victor Hugo thrillingly remember, the devil fish is a terror to the Breton fisherman.

At Douarnanez they have had a little torpedo boat engaged in shooting at the "beluga" at Concarneau a fine guard boat armed with cannon and mitrailleuse.

On the Mediterranean coast the firing of the cannon drove away the mischief-makers for a week—and the fish for a much longer time!

Even poison bits, submarine mines, barrage nets, other nets ingeniously contrived so as to separate the fish from their enemies when both were caught, hydravions to drop explosives or other missiles on the half-seen enemy, and diriglibles for the same purpose, have been either used or suggested for use in this strange warfare.

A very commonsense step was that of sending some of the fishermen to Paris to examine the collection of marine creatures in the Natural History Museum there, with the hope that they might thus be enabled to identify their enemy more certainly.

This is a feather in the cap of such institutions, even if the attempt at identification in this particular case was not very successful.

Striking Fact

A striking fact brought out was that while the Breton fishers were disposed to accuse the grampus and those from the Mediterranean, the dolphin, the long-headed Basques from Foche country had no complaint to make against any of the small cetaceans.

These they rather regarded as useful to them, since they indicate by breaking water at the surface of the sea where shoals of fish are to be found.

The Basques are willing to pit their wits against those of the cetaceans when the latter show them the way to the submarine hunting grounds.

But the whole business may take an unexpected turn from the suggestion of M. H. Legendre, that the fishermen turn the tables upon the cetaceans by fishing for them, instead of fighting them.

He points out that the monks long ago taught the excellence of the dolphin's flesh as "viande maigre," i. e., meat that may be eaten on fast days, because it seems to be fish.

He declares that it is palatable, tender and totally devoid of any fishy taste or odor. So he advocates the chase of dolphins and their relatives, with harpoon guns, as a desirable and valuable addition to human food resources.

THREE MINUTE TRIPS

By Temple Manning

JUST outside the walls of Marrakesh, an Old World city of Morocco, almost untouched by modern civilization, is a place called Guelis. In the interior of this city is the famous square of the Jemaa-el-Fnaa.

This square, although it isn't really a square but an irregular open space, holds the great minaret of the Koutoubia mosque, which is famed throughout the Moslem world, and is the scene of the great twilight.

As the approach of sunset, the dust-laden air becomes luminous, and the great Koutoubia appears to be a mass of molten metal. It is this picturesque and beautiful hour that the inhabitants have chosen for their market hour. The scene is that of a typical fair. The fakirs and mesmerists ply their trade, and each booth is the centre of a vast crowd of buyers or lookers-on.

There is the snake charmer, Barefooted, he dances to and fro, to the music of the reed flute, around the snake. Fascinated, the snake approaches him, poised as if to strike. Sometimes he even does strike at his garments, but the snake charmer remains unscathed.

When there is the story teller. The Moroccans, as indeed are most Orientals, are ardent lily fond of stories, and as a result they will visit one story teller night after night until the story is finished.

Then there are dancers and conjurors, beggars and fakirs of every description, ready to mulct the unwary spectator.

However, the shops and bazaars hold many beautiful, curious or interesting objects. And as a result the place is always thronged with visitors from all over the world. Desirous of picking up some Oriental object cheap. And the traveler will not find that he has wasted his time visiting this interesting region, for here he will find "atmosphere" unsurpassed anywhere in the world.
